THE HERETICS.

Intellectual Movement in the Several Churches

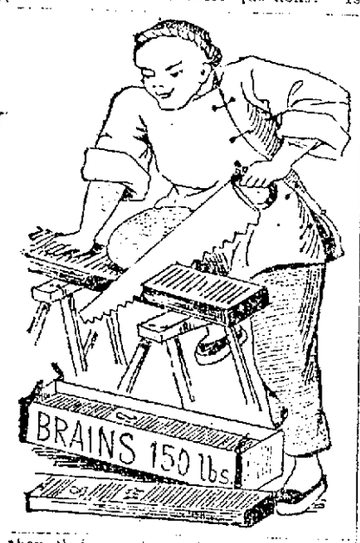

BEATS THE RAGE FOR MAN MILLINERY.

A Strange Catechism—The Hatred of the Unbeliever—Some Old-Fashioned Cursing.

WRITTEN FOR "THE TRIBUNE."

Trials for heresy are the order of the day. Dr. Briggs, having devised a new sort of purgatory and doubted the literal inspiration of the Scriptures, is to answer for it. Mr. Macqueary has been given notice to quit. Dr. Bridgman, an eminent Baptist of New York, has been made to resign his pastorate. The fires are kindling under Heber Newton, and no one knows where it is going to end. When revision was first mooted in the Presbyterian Church somebody said it was going to turn the body into a debating society for an indefinite time, and it looks as if the debate was now in full blast. Some of the brethren do not like it, but others see in it signs of life and movement not necessarily damnable. For my part I think it better to be troubled about matters of grave concern than the eternal fuss about church millinery and postures over which the English Church expends itself in furious church cackle. Here, for instance, I find in the London Church Times a bundle of letters which show what its people are concerned about. There are two letters on the High Church tendencies of the Kirk of Scotland, with an account of such monograms as I. H. S., and holy water fonts in St. Giles' Cathedral, Edinburgh; three letters about the Passion Play; two about John Wesley's shorthand journal; one complaining that the Anglican bishops attend Old Catholic conferences on the continent; another explaining what is the proper color for St. Luke's Day; two reporting that the Psalter is recited daily by the Chapter of Lincoln; two discussing the proper posture to be taken during the collects; one on non-communicating attendance; one whether Petersburg Cathedral is the ugliest in the kingdom; one whether Canon Turnock improved the tone of Churchmanship; one whether the Lords of the Council have met in the Cockpit in Whitehall since the time of Queen Anne; one rejoicing that permission has been given to restore the chancel in the Chapel of Ease in London so as "to redeem in some way the ugliness of the meanest Church in Christendom."

This sort of intellectual stagnation usually goes with a comfortable bigotry which regards with a certain satisfaction the unhappy prospects for the next world of those who worship under another brand. In England all those outside of the established church of whatever denomination are classed under one head as Dissenters, and the attitude held toward unlucky outsiders by a few of the old school is illustrated by an extraordinary catechism published by the Vicar of Great Barling for the use of schools. After stating that Dissenters are to be treated as heretics, the catechism contains these questions: "Is then their worship a laudable service?" Answer—"No; because they worship God according to their own evil and corrupt imaginations, and not according to His revealed will, and therefore their worship is idolatrous." Again, "Is Dissent a great sin?" "Yes, it is in direct opposition to our duty toward God." That Dissenters have not been excommunicated is explained by saying that "the law of the land does not allow the wholesome law of the church to be acted upon." Those who imitate the church services most nearly are pronounced the most dangerous because the minuteness of the differences between them and the true fold shows that their falling away is due to their being "not in a state of salvation." It is pronounced sinful and presumptuous for persons who are called Dissenting teachers to usurp the "priestly office" by reading prayers originally designed for the "priest to offer up in behalf of the people." And it is "most assuredly" wicked to enter a meeting house at all.

Possibly this is an extreme case, but it may be taken as an instance of the intellectual condition due to the absence of doubt and inquiry. It is an example of that self-satisfied certainty out of which the only logical outcome is the faggot for the heretic. It is obvious that if you believe that eternal misery is the result of a given belief it is your sacred duty to stamp out that belief and prevent its spread by putting heretics to the fire and sword. It is not, as some have supposed, a question of punishment at all, or even of vengeance, but simply of safety. The whole thing is so far removed from us today that we do not realize the mental attitude of those stern folk, which was really not unlike that of New Orleans toward the Mafia, except that their proceedings were more orderly and cold-blooded, and there was less personal feeling. Nevertheless the same logic is just as good today as it was three hundred years ago, but it has to force behind it because of this widespread spirit of inquiry, which has left theology in a state of solution.

A thin shadow of this strenuous hatred of the unbeliever survives today in the not uncommon tendency to lay the responsibility of punishment on a higher power; attribute the unhappy fortunes of the small boy who goes fishing on Sunday to a judgment of Providence. An instance of this is found in an account published in an Ohio paper not very long ago of an alleged judgment visited upon a local atheist. As he stood in a field a fire broke out all around him and not all the exertions of his neighbors could budge him. There he stayed until his body was consumed. The story is an old one and a delver in musty tombs unearthed the original for the New York Tribune. Somewhere in the year 1580 Allen Milbourn had printed in London a ballad bearing this title: "A Wonderful Example of God's Justice shewed upon one Jasper Cunningham, a Gentleman Born in Scotland, who was of opinion that there was neither God nor Devil." The ballad is two long for citation, but a few lines will show how closely the modern Ohio version followed the original—it, indeed, it is the original, and not merely a variant of an older story:

"For in the Garden,
Whereas he did abide,
Suddenly a fire
Sprang up on every side;
Which round about inclosed
This damned wretch that day,
Who roar'd and cry'd most grievous,
But could not start away."

Observe how the details of the Ohio legend appear in the following verse, too:

"But naught prevailed.
For all that they could do;
Long staves and also pitchforks,
They reached him unto,
Because they durst not venture
Near to the fiery flame,
He taking hold upon them,
To draw him out of the same."

The end of the wretch is the same in both stories. It is a curious illustration of the indestructibility of old stories, and could the manner of its resurrection be traced the facts would no doubt be interesting.

There is in one of the creeds a dogma that the Pope is Antichrist, but it is no longer mentioned in polite religious circles; and yet I find the learned Dr. Kliefoth considers it necessary in his ponderous work on eschatology to include a serious argument to prove that there is something wrong about it. I give a synopsis of his argument:

Concerning Antichrist, he maintains that, while there is undoubtedly an Antichristic element in the Papacy, yet that it cannot be affirmed that the Pope is Antichrist, since the prophecies not only refer to a specific individual (and they cannot be applied to any particular Pope), but also since Antichrist, while coming from the Church, is not to remain in the Church, nor be one who is content with a mingling of Antichristianity and Christianity; on the contrary, his activity is to be concentrated upon the persecution and annihilation of everything Christian and all Christians.

Imagine a man taking himself so seriously as to sit down and write at considerable length and with a face of clay an explanation and apology for so preposterous a doctrine.

It is this worship of creeds and books as fetishes, of which Dr. Briggs complains, and while it produces from the minds of the earned a fine quality of unconscious humor, the results become grotesque in the hands of the illiterate or the half-taught. It was this spirit of worship of the letter which gave birth to the sermon of a negro preacher, who took as his text: "He maketh our feet as hens' feet" (hastily reading "hens'" for "hinds'"), and from the fact that the hen has three toes in front and only one behind, being therefore unable to walk backward, deduced what he called "the glorious doctrine of once in grace always in grace." Scriptural exegesis could hardly further go.

This sort of thing, naturally enough, is a cause of tribulation among the more intelligent who do not like their religion made a laughing stock, and this condition was the cause of a very pretty little spat between two religious papers not long ago. In its explanation of the Sunday school Bible lesson on the book of Jonah, The Baptist Teacher took the following extraordinary position: "If it had pleased God so to order, it would have been entirely possible even for an oyster to swallow Jonah—quite as easy as for Jonah to have swallowed an oyster." Upon which The Congregationalist thus comments: "If it had pleased God so to order, it would have been possible for Him to have made an oyster a Sunday school teacher; and it would have hardly been more remarkable than that one who could write such nonsense as the comment quoted should be chosen for that place. But the oyster, if allowed to follow his natural instincts, would have kept his mouth closed."

I will conclude with a warm example of the fine old fashioned sanctified cursing of a sort that is becoming very rare. There is a publication known as the Messiahs Herald, which claims to be, I know not why, "the oldest prophetical journal in the world." In this was printed a sermon entitled "Elijah's Ride to Heaven," and here is a sample of its prophecies: "How the blue flame of death will envelop the casks and the barrels and the demijohns! How the bartenders will flee away when the crash of God's vengeance shall fall on the marble floors and cut-glass decanters and elegant mirrors and magnificent surroundings! O, what a glorious bonfire the whole thing will make! Lord God, we want to see that day."

WORKINGWOMAN'S CLUB.

The Outing at Orinda Park on Saturday Next.

The Workingwoman's Club has extended an invitation to the "Girls' Union" of San Francisco to accompany the members on their picnic excursion to "Orinda Park." California and Nevada Railroad, on Saturday, May 30th, and Mrs. M. G. Campbell, president of this union, will address the club at the usual place of meeting, Chabot Home, on Monday evening next, at 7:45 o'clock; subject, "Working Girls' Clubs, and the People's Palace, London. Mrs. Campbell has recently returned from a tour of inspection of the workings of this co-operative movement among bread-winners of the gentle sex, and will no doubt have much to impart both instructive and entertaining to her listeners. Young ladies anxious to learn more as to the objects of such organizations are cordially invited to be present on this occasion.

With this meeting the club will adjourn for the summer; but the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Prescott, will be at home to members of the club, on Monday evenings, as usual.

A Young Ladies' Guild Reception.

A pleasant social reception was tendered by the Young Ladies' Guild of the Church of the Advent on Thursday evening at the residence of Miss Scott on East Twelfth street. The house was prettily decorated for the dainty affair and a pleasant evening was spent by those present.

High School Parties.

The Senior B class of the Oakland High School will give a reception to the Senior A class at Cavalry Hall Monday evening. On Wednesday the Senior A class give its final party at the same hall.

HOW HE EVENED UP WITH THE ROBBERS.

Some Pointers on Chevalier Barley and a Little Turn in Con. California and Virginia.

WRITTEN FOR "THE TRIBUNE."

There has been quite a flutter in the stock market here lately, and the movement is attributed to James L. Flood—young Flood as he generally is called. There was once a time when people thought that young Flood had never shown any capacity except for selfish enjoyment, but they don't think that way now, especially on Pine street, where they are pretty good judges of financial human nature.

Flood can make money decently and has sense enough to keep what he makes. He has a good deal of enterprise, is smart to detect jobs in the market, behaves himself well in public, tells the truth, and never takes any man's money by gaining his confidence. If young Flood wants what another man has got, he plays an open game to get it, and does not try to persuade the other fellow that their relations are those of friendship and not of business. They do say that he relieved Bob Morrow of more than a quarter of a million recently, invested the money in Con. Virginia at $3 and sold out at $15, which, if true, means that he has made more than a million, but stock yarns are like the tales they told in the old days of faro, when a $200 winning was always magnified to $6000 before the winner had tried the cocktails in half a dozen saloons. I know of one smart transaction that Flood had a hand in, which shows he has at least got the sense of keeping his own counsel.

There used to be trio of gamblers in town who, for a long time had things all their own way. They were all engaged in trade during the day and at night they would shake dice for large sums of money with young fools who had more coin or credit than sense. They were swindlers who pretended to be in trade for a living, but shook dice for an income. Two of them were in the furniture trade and one had the management of an estate. One of the furniture men was a sort of resident drummer for Eastern wholesale houses and the other has an interest in a fine store on a side street in this city.

Their plan of swindling was on a level with the baseness of their confidence operations on friends. They did not possess the skill needed for really artistic manipulation of dice, but did what is called vouch work, covering their tracks with their position as business men. They swindled the late Mervyn Donohue out of more than $20,000, they robbed one of the owners of the Southern Pacific out of $10,000 and he found it out and told them in the presence of a crowd that they were only fit to fill cells in the County Jail. He also told them that if he ever saw any gentlemen engage in a game of chance with them he would expose them. They stole $7000 from a prominent railroad man, they robbed Mr. Goodyear of $15,000, and lastly they took young Flood into camp for $5000, and he got a hint that all was not right. I believe that this story has been told around town another way, but I am telling it as it occurred, and not as some people might like the world to think that it happened.

Their plan of campaign was simple. They worked by twos and threes, and generally contrived to play their game of dice in front of a bar, the conspirators standing side by side and the victim on the extreme right. The man at the extreme left would throw out the dice and the next man to him would pick them up, saying:

"Taree sixes."

Perhaps he would call two pair or four of a kind, but he always called a high hand. When he called he would spread himself over the bar so that he came between the victim and his partner. If the three of them were in the game the third man would lean over to shut out the view of the victim.

Now when a man does not see the dice that are thrown more than once in half a dozen times and the dice he does not see are invariably high, he is likely to become suspicious or at least crabbed enough to insist on counting the spots himself. The swindlers took good care to provide against any curiosity of that kind and their system was based on a profound knowledge of human nature. When the game had been running a short time the two would have a wordy fight, calling each other all sorts of names. It would be worded this way:

"Two fours."

"And deuces."

This would be the man who threw the dice talking in reply to the call of the other man who was counting.

"No deuces."

"Yes, I had dueces too."

"Not much. There was a deuce and a tray."

"I tell you I had a pair of deuces."

"And I tell you that you had nothing of the kind."

"I did have them and I propose to count them too."

"Not in this game" (with sarcastic emphasis.)

"Yes, in this game."

"Oh, I guess not. You can't give me any of that kind of work. I'm no chump."

"Do you mean to insinuate that I am trying to cheat?"

"Well, if it comes down to that, I reckon you are claiming more than belongs to you."

"You are a liar."

"You are a —— —— liar, and I'll ——"

"Gentlemen, gentlemen, please don't quarrel like that. You are both gentlemen and no doubt you both think you are right, but one of you is mistaken."

This is the innocent who is being robbed that is talking. His nerves are sensitive and he would do anything rather than have a regular row about any feature of a game in which he was taking a hand.

"He remonstrated that I miscalled a hand."

"Oh shake over again," says the peacemaker.

"No: he only had one pair and I know it and that goes."

Then the quarrel is gone over again with renewed vigor. Peace is finally restored when the innocent is more than convinced that there is a feeling of bitterness between the pair. When he has lost a lot of money and won a lot of the accompanying drinks, another sham fight is got up for his benefit and all the time number two and three are giving number one points that the dice did not show for him.

This was about the way in which young Flood was relieved of several thousands, and he found the game out for himself. He first noticed that the furniture men were always friendly after these interchanges of abuse, and then he noticed that when the dice were thrown for a big pot he was not allowed to see them. Then he insisted on shaking on a small round table, and he saw they were shy of the game. That convinced him that he did not lose his money fairly, and he meditated.

There is nothing in the world like meditation. When a man does himself the honor to have a good square thinking match all alone the chances are ten to one that lots of things will come into his mind that never entered it before.

Soon after the meditation Flood showed a good deal of interest in the barley market. He talked about barley just as Colonel Sellers talked about eye water. His friends listened attentively. Said Jim:

"I've just found out that all the brewers have to have this Chevalier barley to make the good beer with. Our warehouse people tell me there's quite a short crop of it this year in the State; not enough to go round. They can't get any from abroad nearer than Canada, and that means a dollar a hundred freight. If a fellow could pick up half the crop there would be such a shortage in the market that the price would go away up."

These words sounded like words of wisdom, and Flood's friend listened. Then they went around and asked many people and were told that the truth had been spoken. So they were more eager than ever to secure a chance to make a deal in the barley market.

They confessed the strength of their desire to Flood and asked him if there was not some way in which they could make the corner. He said that the only reason he had not gone into the scheme on his own account was that he did not have all the spare cash needed, and having just bought some real estate, he did not like to borrow or people would think he was hard up. Now if half a dozen or so made up a pool they could handle the product. He would be willing to make one.

"Would he handle the joint account?"

It was not much in his line, but to oblige them he would.

And he did.

Now it came to pass about that time that there was much Chevalier barley in Flood's warehouse.

The pool was duly made up, the cash was turned over to Flood, and he sought out some grain brokers with orders to buy like fury and bull the market.

They bought much barley, but not more than a noisy man in a check suit and plug hat was able to sell them at prices ranging from fifteen to fifty cents above the prices that had prevailed before the pool was made. Then Flood let the company know that he had bought the barley and would like to know where it should be kept or what should be done with it. Should they store the grain or take advantage of the boom and sell to the grain dealers, instead of waiting till brewers came round to buy?

They would sell and realize.

They did.

They realized that buying barley at $1 60 and selling it at $1 15 makes a $50 00 margin look as slim as the edge of a razor—not a dull razor, but a very sharp razor.

How long it took them to realize that they had bought barley from Flood, I do not know, but I do know that Jim Flood got back the money they stole from him and did not make any fuss about the doing of it.

Have you all been to see Men and Women as they appear at the Baldwin? If not, you would like to know what there is to see. I will tell you. There is a pudding-faced assistant cashier who goes wrong in the first act and whines like a cur during the next three. He makes his mother, sweetheart and half a dozen friends miserable and he makes the audience yearn to arise and kick him. This creature is the hero of the play and you can guess what the others are like. They are a copy of the people you read about in fourth-rate novels.

ON JACKSON STREET.

Two Modern Homes of Great Architectural Beauty.

RISE OF AN ARISTOCRATIC QUARTER.

Mansions of Captain Edwin Goodall and W. H. Bailey—Art and Taste in Home Building.

Long years ago the late Dr. Samuel Merritt crossed to Oakland from San Francisco in a row boat, was charmed with the oak grove near the southwestern shore of the northern arm of the estuary, purchased fifty acres, set it out in orchard and soon built himself a home there. The western line of the property ran through the center of the block between what are now Jackson and Alice streets. At the Fourteenth-street line, Jackson street became the western boundary. Twelfth street was the southern boundary as far as Oak street. Then the line jogged back to Fourteenth street. The estuary, which was afterward dammed and became Lake Merritt, bounded the property on the other sides. This orchard of Dr. Merritt's afterward became the most fashionable portion of the city and Jackson street synonymous with all that is ultra-fashionable in Oakland.

Where the Fourteenth-street line crosses Jackson street Dr. Merritt erected a great gate like the entrance to a manor. Through his orchard were graveled drives shaded by big cypresses where Jackson, Madison (then called Julia) and Oak streets now are, but they were not open streets. The Merritt mansion fronted on Madison street as it does now and there were no houses on Jackson street north of Twelfth.

Along in the 60's the late Rev. L. Hamilton built the home now occupied by his widow and family at Jackson and Fourteenth streets, just outside the Merritt orchard. Soon afterward Henry Rogers, then Dr. Merritt's man of affairs, built his house just within the Merritt grounds. Very shortly Dr. Merritt began the erection of the dwellings which brought people of means to the locality and gave the street its social standing.

The first of these houses was the one now owned and occupied by Arthur D. Thomson of the First National Bank, at the corner of Thirteenth and Jackson streets. The next was on the lot adjoining on the north, Thirteenth street not having been opened at that time. This was built for E. M. Hall. It is now occupied by J. C. Kimble, but was so altered by Isaac Upham a few years ago that the old house is not recognizable in the present structure. Both of these houses were outside the Merritt orchard.

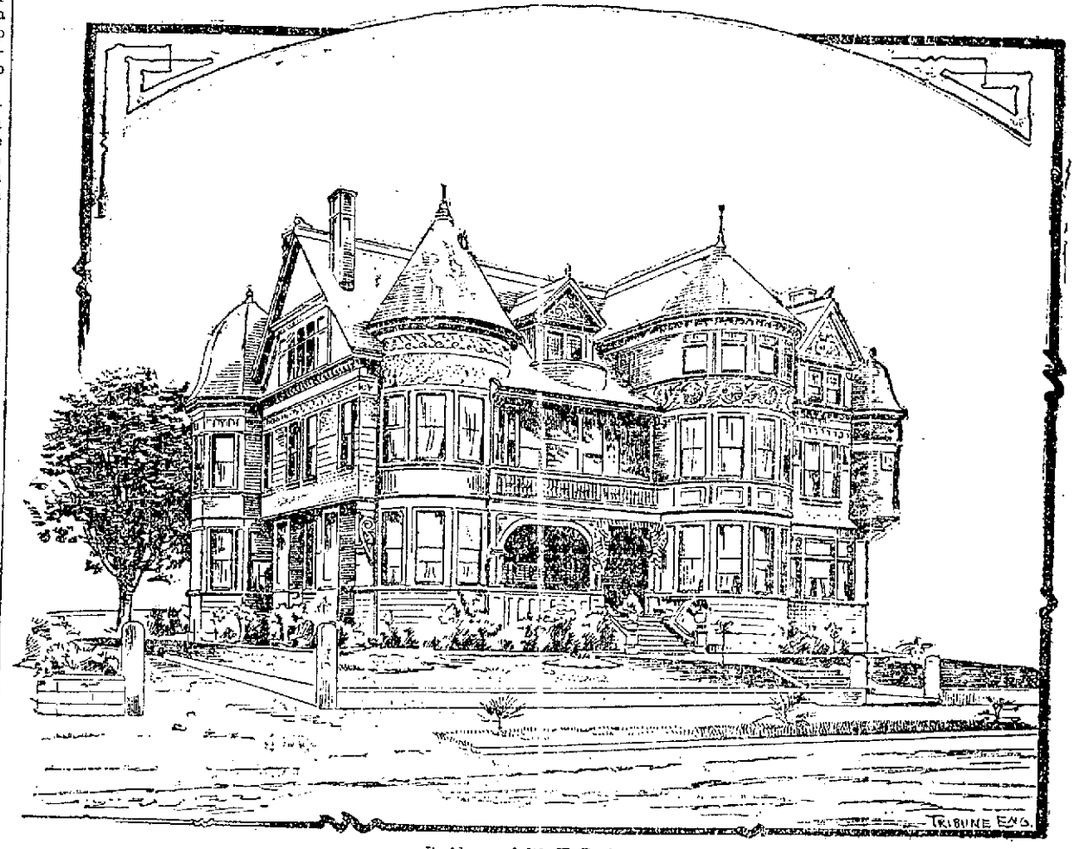

Next were erected the houses which, within the past few years, have been moved from the lots whereon W. H. Bailey and Edwin Goodall have built their splendid modern mansions. One of these now stands on Harrison street, near Durant, and was, until recently, occupied by Mr. Bailey. The other has been cut in two and constitutes part of two houses on Jackson street, at the corner of Fourth.

The Dyer house was soon after built by the late Captain P. S. Wilcox, and the houses of Captain Edward Hackett, Judge John A. Stanly, A. P. Brayton, R. G. Brown, Mr. Harries and others were rapidly put up and either leased or sold. This gave Jackson street its standing. The houses were, with one or two notable exceptions, the finest in the city at that time, but many hardly fit modern architectural ideas, and improvement has followed improvement, idea has been added to idea, until now it seems the climax has been reached in the two modes of architectural beauty of which pictures grace this page.

One is the residence of Captain Edwin Goodall, the other the house of W. H. Bailey, whose plantations in the Hawaiian Islands are known all over the world. Both buildings were designed by W. J. Matthews and are of original design.

The Goodall residence is of the free renaissance style, with a strong leaning toward the Romanesque. From the foundation to the second story stone and brick are the materials used in the construction, and the second story is shingled. Marble steps lead to the tiled vestibule, which is paneled in oak. The front door leads into a magnificent hall, 24x31 feet, the dimensions which is oak-paneled and has a grand staircase leading to the second story, where there is a large hall, which can be used for a picture gallery if desired. At the right of the entrance is a reception room finished in gold and ivory trimmings. Leading from the hall is the dining room, 17x31 feet, the walls of which are paneled in tomano wood and the ceiling is built with beams of the same material. Something worth noticing is the carved screen that divides the dining room into an alcove which can be used for a breakfast room. The screen is very elegant and extremely rich in effect. To the left of the entrance are large living rooms and billiard room connected. The billiard room is finished in panel wainscoting and redwood beams. The living and reception rooms have plaster ceiling decorations which are new in style and must become the leading features of future house decorations. All the rooms in the house are handsomely frescoed.

The chambers in the second story are finished in highly polished natural woods, and the attic has a stage arranged for private theatricals, or it may be used for a ballroom. The main bathroom is wainscotted in Colton onyx marble and the other bathrooms are tiled. All have hardwood floors. There is a basement under the entire house containing bathrooms, lavatories and servants' rooms, a refrigerator room, which is an unusual feature in residences, storerooms, a wine room, etc. Among the notable features of the house are the open plumbing, with silvered traps and pipes, and the sleeve or running from basement to attic. The house is heated by hot water. The kitchen has a tiled floor, and behind the sinks are marble slabs eight feet square. The butler's pantry is beautifully paneled in oak and has a hardwood inlaid floor, and is probably one of the most perfect butler's pantries in the State, having all the conveniences. The principal rooms, instead of being finished in the stereotyped way of tiles, have large slabs of black and gold marble, or colored Algerian marble. Mr. Goodall has spared no expense nor trouble to make his home complete and a model in every respect.

Residence of W. H. Bailey.

The residence of W. H. Bailey is of the free renaissance design, with steep roofs, and having the features of a French chateau modernized. It is built and finished in woods of different varieties, the second story is shingled and has plaster friezes. The carvings on both the exterior and interior are very elaborate and extremely rich.

The interior is finished in beautiful woods that are very scarce even in the Sandwich Islands, their native place. The hall, within the front door, is twenty-four feet square, and is finished in koa wood, probably the most beautiful that grows. It was obtained from Mr. Bailey's plantation at the Islands, and his home is probably the only one in the country that has any of it in its construction. The stairway newells are of koa wood, to which the natives attach a religious significance, and is as valuable as it is rare, there being but very little of it in all the Sandwich Islands. The hall is paneled in koa wood, with ceilings of the same material, making the hall look very rich with its unique staircase. The reception room to the right of the entrance is finished in birdseye maple and beautifully frescoed. The dining room is finished in oak, with paneled walls and molded ceiling.

To the left of the hall are the living room, library and billiard room, all connected, and the smoking room. The library is oak paneled and the billiard room is finished in curly oak, while the living room is paneled with curly redwood. The rooms in the second story are handsome. All are furnished in natural woods and beautifully frescoed, as are also the bath rooms. The hall floors are tiled. The bathtubs are of the decorated-top pattern, and the plumbing is all open. The attic is finished in many rooms of goodly proportions, including a gymnasium, and the basement is finished in the usual style, with rooms for storage and servants. The house, like that of Mr. Goodall, is heated with hot water. Nowhere can be found more complete residences than those of Captain Goodall and Mr. Bailey.

Lyric Club Concert.

The Lyric Club will give its next concert June 1st, at which the following will appear: Miss Dora Goodsell, soprano; Mortimer Dores, pianist; Adolph Ladu, 'cellist, assisted by an orchestra of forty pieces.

A SNAKE ON A CROSS.

Some Presbyterians Think It Symbolizes the Devil.

BLAINE IS IMPROVING RIGHT ALONG

A Kansas Storm Which Destroyed Both Bugs and Strawberries—A Rubber Firm Stretches Too Far.

DETROIT, May 23.—After some miscellaneous business at the Presbyterian General Assembly this morning ten minutes was assigned between the first and second orders of the day to representatives of the Evangelical church in Italy.

Dr. Cook of Philadelphia took up the first order, the report of the Committee on a Seal for the Assembly. After defending the design of a serpent on a cross from the attacks of those who regard it as ugly and the symbol of Satan further consideration of the report was made the first order for Monday morning.

Rev. Luigi Angelini, representative of the Evangelical Church of Italy gave facts, showing health and vigor in the churches there.

The second order of the day—ministerial relief—was taken up. The committee reported a balance of $10,000, the total receipts being $170,001. The maximum sum per minister fixed by the assembly was $300, and the average paid nearly $280. Rev. Dr. Sattell, secretary of the board, made an eloquent and touching appeal for his object.

Elder Junkin of Philadelphia made a strong argument that the assembly should act on principle in the matter. Continuing he said: What would be our present condition but for the work done by ministers and their families. Think of the maximum of $300. Is that enough for men who must spend ten of their best years in getting their education and all the rest of their working years in arduous work in which money cannot, as a rule, be laid up. We must get this whole matter laid on our conscience. It is a point of honor to pay an honest debt, and this is a debt of honor if ever there was one.

The Committee on Bills and Overtures recommended a direct reference of certain overtures to their appropriate committee without being before the assembly first. This was adopted.

The long-standing matter regarding pecuniary obligation to the church at Jacksonville, Fla. was referred to the Financial Committee with instructions to report early next week. An adjournment was then taken till Monday morning in order to enable delegates to leave for Ann Arbor.

RIOTING IN THE ARGENTINE.

A Little Emeute Which Is Classed as a Revolution.

BUENOS AYRES, May 23.—The statement that a revolution has broken out in the Province of Cordova is confirmed. There was firing in the streets of Cordova and in the province of that name on Thursday and Friday. It is believed that the revolt was instigated by the leaders of rival factions in Buenos Ayres. Government troops quelled the disturbance yesterday evening. The Chamber of Deputies has adopted the bill postponing payments on bank deposits for twenty days.

KENTUCKY REPUBLICANS

Endorse Harrison's Administration and Ask for an Election Law.

LEXINGTON, Ky., May 22.—The Republican State Convention nominated the following ticket: For Governor, T. Z. Wood; Attorney-General, L. J. Crawford; Treasurer, Eli Farmer; Superintendent of Public Instruction, L. V. Dodge; Register of the Land Office, W. J. A. Hardin; Clerk of the Court of Appeals, E. H. Blaine. A resolution was adopted endorsing Harrison's administration, and craving Congress for an election law that will give every American citizen equal rights at the polls.

POLITICS AND RELIGION.

The Reformed Presbyterians Discourage the Voting of Ministers.

PITTSBURG, May 23.—Rev. Dr. McClurkin of the Reformed Presbyterian Theological Seminary of Allegheny has announced his intention of resigning the chair of theology and history in that institution. His reason is that seven Reformed Presbyterian ministers were suspended for voting at a political election. In his letter of resignation he says: "I have been forced to the conclusion that the individual conscience of an American citizen should be allowed to decide as to his duty in casting a ballot for a righteous rule."

NOW THE NAVAJOES.

The Indians Insist on Keeping the New Mexico Whites Stirred Up.

FORT WINGATE, N. M., May 23.—A detachment just returned from recruiting service on the Navajo reservation brings reports indicating prospective and perhaps serious trouble there. The Navajoes claim that their rights are being invaded by prospectors from Colorado. Differences arise from the question of the right to prospect for gold in the Cariso mountains, near the border of Colorado. The Indians say that they will kill all miners found there.

OAKLAND'S TURN NEXT.

Bids Opened for Work on the New Post-Office at Sacramento.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Bids have been opened at the Treasury Department for the stone and brick masonry for the post-office at Sacramento. J. P. Phillips of San Francisco was the lowest bidder, provided granite is used. His bid was $138,000. Kreuzeberger & Harvie of Sacramento are the lowest bidders if sandstone is used. Their figures are $115,000.

SHORT ON WHEAT.

Canadian Millers Find That They Haven't Enough Grain.

TORONTO, May 23.—At a meeting here of the Dominion Millers' Association, it was discovered that there are but 5,000,000 bushels of wheat in grain and manufactured flour in the whole Dominion. This quantity is a million bushels short of the estimated requirements of members of the association.

THAT GLORIOUS CLIMATE.

Kansas Strawberries Are Ruined, but the Wheat Is Saved.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., May 23.—A heavy wind and rainstorm did much damage to buildings, fences and orchards in this and Douglas counties last night. The rain fell in torrents, ruining the strawberry crop, but saving the wheat from the bugs.

GARCIA IS "WID US."

He Declares Cuba Annexed to the United States.

NEW YORK, May 23.—The noted Cuban brigand, Manuel Garcia, has issued a manifesto declaring Cuba annexed to the United States, and setting forth the grievances of the Cuban people against Spain. The proclamation is being circulated here, in Florida, in other Atlantic States and throughout Cuba.

A STAR FAILURE.

A New Jersey Rubber Company Stretches Its Credit.

TRENTON, N. J., May 23.—The Star Rubber Company is in financial difficulty. Counsel for the company said: "There has been a contraction of credit, and the company's liabilities are more than it can meet at this instant." Secretary Bell, he added, had informed him that the company would pay two dollars for every one it owed. Preferences will be given as follows: Johnathan Stewart, president, $120,000; T. A. Bell, secretary and manager, $70,000; Philip P. Dunn, treasurer, $50,000; William J. Vannest, $50,000. These capitalists are behind several other rubber and crockery concerns, all of which are affected by the condition of the Star Company, whose liabilities may foot up half a million dollars.

BOSTON, May 23.—R. S. Knowles selling agent of the Star Rubber Company of Trenton, N. J., has placed an attachment on the company's stock here to secure personal claims amounting to between $20,000 and $30,000 for advances made on goods sent him by the company.

THE PREACHERS DIFFER.

Evangelical Lutherans Discuss Credal Questions.

LEBANON, Pa., May 23.—At this morning's session of the General Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, a motion to republish an edition of the book of worship in use before the Omaha convention in 1887 led to a long and animated discussion. The resolution was at last indefinitely postponed. The effect of this is that the common service question, which has been so great a source of discussion will not be taken up at the convention of the General Synod.

MAN FOR THE SABBATH.

Reformed Presbyterians Want the World's Fair Closed on Sunday.

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—There was but a single session held today by the Reformed Presbytery General Assembly. A vigorous protest was entered against opening the Columbian Exposition on Sunday. The report of the treasurer of the disabled ministers' fund was read and accepted and referred to the Auditing Committee. It was suggested that hereafter all moneys pass directly through the treasurer in order that proper credit may be given donors.

THE GENERAL'S SON.

Bramwell Booth Accused of Being a Stock Gambler.

LONDON, May 23.—The St. James Gazette this evening says the fact that Bramwell Booth, son of General Booth of the Salvation Army, is creditor to the sum of $10,000 of the bankrupt stock of a broker named Taylor, suggests stock exchange gambling on the part of Mr. Booth. The Gazette, on this ground, demands that an explanation be given.

NO LOAN FOR CANADA.

French Bankers Do Not Care to Help the Canucks.

PARIS, May 23.—The negotiations which have been in progress here with a view to raising the new Canadian loan were fruitless. The group of French bankers who favored the plan of floating the loan are not satisfied with the guarantee offered. Negotiations will be resumed in the autumn.

A BLACK LIST.

Leaders in the Great Coke Strike Cannot Get Back to Work.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., May 23.—Large numbers of the coke men have been applying for work, but in every case where a leader or active committeeman applied he was refused employment. The indications are that fully 1000 names of leaders have been placed on the black list, and with such a large number idle, it is thought the strike may be again revived.

THE FEVER AT MALTA.

Disease Wasting Soldiers and Sailors in the British Fleet.

MALTA, May 23.—A fever is raging among the officers and sailors of the British fleet in these waters. There is an average of forty officers and men sick on board each vessel. The naval hospital at this place is overcrowded with sick sailors.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH BLAINE

The Answer "He's All Right" Will Come in a Day or Two.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Secretary Blaine is still improving. No plans have yet been made for his departure from this city, but he is expected to be able to go wherever he wishes in a few days.

The Veendam All Right.

NEW YORK, May 23.—The Veendam, the steamer reported overdue and disabled, is expected here in the course of a day or so, according to incoming steamer reports.

Jack's Come Home Today.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Arrived, the steamer Augusta Victoria from Hamburg.

A TRACK FOR DRIVERS.

Seventy-two Acres Offered for $86,400.

Several of the most active members of the Gentlemen's Driving Association met together last night and heard the report of the Committee on Grounds. It was stated that the railroad people who own the land at the southeast corner of San Leandro road and High street have made the association an offer of seventy-two acres, being that part of the tract lying north of the railroad track, for $1200 an acre. The association will employ a surveyor to ascertain if the land is so situated that a track may be built without undue expense, and if favorable a bargain will be closed. This information will be had early next week and the Drivers' Association will hold a called meeting next Thursday night.

LAST DAY OF THE RACES.

Folly Wins the Dash For Beaten Two-Year-Olds.

This is the last day of the races of the Jockey Club at the Oakland Trotting Park.

The first race, a dash of eleven-sixteenths of a mile, for beaten two-year-olds, was won by Folly; Annie Lewis, second. Time, 1:11¼.

THEY BLAZED AWAY

Two Bands of Vigilantes Open Fire on Each Other.

NAVAJOES WILL KILL PROSPECTORS.

Bids on the Sacramento Postoffice—The New Clock Game Is Not Considered a Game of Chance.

DEMMINGS, Neb., May 23.—While a party of vigilantes, who had just captured a cattle thief named McAlvey near here, were bringing him to town last night they met another party of vigilantes. The night was very dark and each party mistook the other for thieves. Fire was opened on both sides, and before the mistake was discovered Judge Aitkins, Treasurer of the county, and McAlvey, the cattle thief, were killed. No arrests have been made.

NOT A GAME OF CHANCE.

The New Clock Game Can Run in the Metropolis.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 23.—Judge Worley this morning rendered a decision, holding that what is known as the "clock game," as now conducted in the metropolis is not a game of chance. The game pretends to record the rise and fall of mining shares, but the control rests entirely with the operators of the instrument.

TWO MURDEROUS MEN.

Suspects Arrested at Butte, Montana, Accused of Two Crimes.

PORTLAND, May 23.—The police still maintain reticence regarding the arrest at Butte, Mont., of two men suspected of the murder of William Barbour, the Lebanon merchant whose body was found in the Willamette river, near this city, on May 3d. An officer arrived there yesterday with requisition papers. The police claim to have a complete chain of evidence against them. It is also thought the men arrested are the murderers of the Rev. Mr. Gardner and wife near Napa, Cal., last fall.

A STATUE TO LINNAEUS.

Swedish Residents Present One to the City of Chicago.

CHICAGO, May 23.—A statue of Linnaeus, the botanist, a counterpart of one in Stockholm, was unveiled in Lincoln Park today. It is of bronze, sixteen feet high, and stands upon a granite pedestal. The statue was presented to the city by the Swedish residents of Chicago. The exercises were attended by representatives of the Swedish societies from St. Louis, Kansas City, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Omaha and other cities.

FRENCH DISTILLERS.

They Want Free Trade in Corn and Molasses.

PARIS, May 23.—Delegates representing a syndicate of French distillers called today upon the Minister of Commerce in order to urge the immediate temporary admission of foreign corn and molasses without duty into France in order to prevent foreign distillers from competing in French markets, and in order to enable French distillers to compete in foreign markets.

LYING DEAD IN THE GRASS.

Mary Doherty's Body Found in a Yard at Berkeley.

A Mother's Grief at Finding Her Daughter's Corpse Lying on a Slab in the Morgue.

Yesterday afternoon the body of a young girl was found lying in the grass in the rear of a vacant house owned by Chris Johnson, near the corner of Seventh street and University avenue, Berkeley. The girl was lying on her back with her hands clasped behind her head and her eyes wide open, and a young son of Mr. Johnson, who found the body, thought she was drunk.

The body was brought to the Morgue, but beyond a small package of Paris green in her dress pocket there were no papers by which the body might be identified.

Today Mrs. Doherty, who lives at Berryman station, identified the remains as those of her daughter Mary, 24 years of age. The mother's grief at finding her daughter's body in the Morgue was intense and she could not be quieted for some.

Mary was a domestic. Her mother said she had been living with her brother and married sister at 102½ Natoma street, San Francisco. On Monday last Mary left there to go to her mother's house in Berkeley, and since then she was not seen by any members of her family until her dead body was found in the morgue. The mother cannot account for her daughter's mysterious death, but a resident of Berkeley says that the girl was seen emerging from a Berkeley saloon a few evenings ago. Whether it is a case of suicide, foul play or whether she wandered away and died from natural causes is not known. An inquest will be held this afternoon.

Dr. H. E. Muller held an autopsy on the body and found traces of Paris green in her stomach. Therefore the assumption is justified that the girl committed suicide.

FATAL FALL FROM A TRAIN.

J. H. Hoffman of San Francisco Killed Instantly This Afternoon.

The Accidental Fall From a Platform of an Eastern-Bound Local Train on the Mole.

J. H. Hoffman, a resident of San Francisco was instantly killed on the Oakland Mole shortly after noon today by falling from a platform of the local train due at Broadway at 12:31 P. M. One of the passengers noticed the man fall and informed Brakeman Wood, who went back to the spot and found that Hoffman's death must have been instantaneous, for his head was badly crushed. The body was brought to the Morgue at 2 o'clock. The only papers found on the body was a written guarantee from Davis Brothers in San Francisco for a silver watch which the dead man purchased yesterday for $15.

TWO WIVES OF ONE MAN

They Unite Against Him in a Suit in Court.

Mary Brannan sued John Gilmore to quiet title to some land in East Oakland, and Judge Ellsworth tried the case this afternoon.

John Gilmore appeared in court with two wives at his heels and strange to say the two wives united against Mr. Gilmore.

Gilmore married Mrs. Brannan several years ago. Mr. Brannan thought she was a widow but she wasn't, and just after she was pleasantly settled with Gilmore Brannan reappeared. So she left Gilmore and became Mrs. Brannan once more. Then Gilmore married again, without ever going through the formality of the annulment of the other marriage.

He is now boarding with the Mrs. Brannan that was Mrs. Gilmore.

That came out in the testimony, but Mr. Brannan's place of residence was not mentioned by the witnesses. Mrs. Brannan got a judgment that confirms her title to the land.

AT THE TEMESCAL HOMES.

The Annual Reception of the Ladies' Relief Society.

The annual reception at the homes of the Ladies' Relief Society at Temescal is in progress this afternoon. The old ladies and the young children are enjoying receiving their guests and the lady messengers are busy making the afternoon pleasant for all the guests.

A general invitation had been extended to all interested in the work carried on by the society, namely, the care of children and aged women, and many responded. The sight at the handsome houses and pretty grounds of the society is a pretty spectacle. The reception will end at 5 o'clock.

Colonel Baker and President Garfield.

Colonel E. D. Baker and General Garfield were both for a number of years preachers in the Christian or "Campbellite" Church, of which Rev. Dr. Sweeney is the representative in Oakland. There are many yet living in Ohio, who were baptized by immersion and married by President Garfield, whose funeral was conducted by the "Christian Church" people. During his ministry Garfield held several religious debates with infidels, affirming the "Resurrection of Christ" and the "Inspiration of the Bible," and is said to have been a terror in such discussions to his opponents.

Temperance Union Jubilee.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union will hold a grand jubilee meeting at 3 o'clock tomorrow at the First Methodist Church. Music will be especially good, and speeches will be made by Mrs. Dr. Van Kirk, Mrs. Borland and others. The celebration is of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, especially referring to the "Round-the-world Missionaries for Temperance," Mrs. Mary A. Leavitt and Jessie Ackerman.

A Severed Finger.

Fred Ewald, the chief stereotyper employed by the Tribune Publishing Company, this morning sliced the end of the little finger of his left hand in a trimmer, a machine used for shaving the edges of plates of metal. Dr. Woolsey, who dressed the wound, fears that the almost severed piece will not unite and that Mr. Ewald will lose the end of his finger.

A Perilous Pastime.

Oscar George, Samuel George and William Mahoney were arrested this morning by Officer Downey. They were putting rocks in the railroad switches at Sixteenth-street station. Obstruction of a railroad track is really a felony, but the boys were charged only with malicious mischief.

The Stanford Tract Sale.

The auction sale by William J. Dingee of the Stanford tract adjoining the Linda Vista tract and the Oakland Heights tract, is in progress this afternoon on the grounds.

Instant Death.

J. H. Hoffman of San Francisco was instantly killed by falling from the platform of a local train, east bound, on the Oakland mole shortly after noon today. The body is now at the Morgue.

The Von Leuthe Investigation.

The investigation of the charges made by F. J. Moffitt against Otto Von Leuthe, Secretary of the Associated Charities, is set for this afternoon.

JIMMY FAIR'S LOAD.

The Hypnotic Influence Has Worn Off.

THE YOUNG MAN'S ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

He Falls Under a Railroad Train and Is Rescued by a Police Officer Just in the Nick of Time.

Young Jimmy Fair, son of the many times millionaire, James G. Fair, has recovered from the hypnotic influences of Dr. Brown.

It must be so, for young Jimmy started for Knight's Landing yesterday afternoon, and before he started he proved conclusively that the hypnotic influence against the use of intoxicating liquor was getting weak, for he took on board a full sized, old fashioned Jimmy Fair Jr. jag. The jag was not junior though Jimmy is.

The result was that he was nearly killed at Sixteenth-street station last night.

He boarded the regular Sacramento local train at the pier, but while on his way to West Oakland he suddenly determined to send a dispatch to announce his coming. That dispatch came very nearly being an expensive one for the son of the Bonanza King.

He jumped off of the train at Sixteenth street station and wrote his dispatch. Somehow he could not word it to suit him, and he stayed too long.

The conductor told him to hurry up, but he wouldn't obey.

The train started.

Just as the train was pulling out young Jimmy started too. The train was already under way, but he made a jump for one of the platforms.

He got tangled up in the jag, fell, and rolled under the car.

Officer Tom Downey was there, and rather expected something of the kind and as young Fair went under Tom grasped his legs and pulled him out just in time to save his life. The wheels were already touching his arm.

The young millionaire picked himself up and disappeared toward Oakland and the train went to Knight's Landing less loaded than it was before.

GRADUATES OF OBERLIN.

The Historic College Whose Freshman Class Went to War.

An informal meeting of the Oberlin Association of California was held at the residence of Mrs. S. Gertrude Smyth on Thursday evening, May 21st.

Rev. E. S. Williams, president of the association, presided. A goodly number of graduates, students and friends were present, and many pleasant memories were revived of the college whose noble founders were pledged to the principles of patriotism and the doctrines of anti-slavery.

A fine poem was read by J. W. Peck of Sunol Glen, recalling to mind many amusing and pleasing reminiscences of college days.

Eloquent speeches by H. G. Orton and Dr. Foster Rodh, survivors of the gallant Company C, Seventh Regiment of Ohio Volunteer Infantry, members of the freshman class of Oberlin College at the time of their enlistment, followed.

An interesting recital was that of Mrs. Blackwood on alumnus of Oberlin College. Short speeches followed, participated in by all present, closing a most enjoyable evening.

W. H. Robinson of Alameda was elected president for the ensuing year, and Mrs. S. Gertrude Smythe, secretary and treasurer.

HELSEL HAS LEFT HOME.

He Announces That He Will Not Be Responsible for His Wife's Debts.

H. C. Helsel, foreman of the cabinet shop of the Michigan Furniture Company, has left his home, 217 Helen street, Watts tract, and publicly announces that having left for sufficient reasons, he will no longer be responsible for bills incurred by his wife. Helsel says that his wife owns the house. Boarding with them was a man named William Claxton. Helsel did not like the little walks his wife sometimes would take with Claxton, and, according to his story, he told Claxton that he must leave when his month expired.

"If he goes, I go too," said Mrs. Helsell, according to her husband's statement.

"Well, why don't you go now," he replied.

"What's the matter with you going?" responded she. "I own the house."

So Helsel has left the cottage in the Watts tract and hies to a newspaper to give notice to all whom it may concern.

A number of Niles ladies attended the lunch given by Mrs. H. H. Mayhew of San Francisco this week. A most enjoyable day was spent.

The school children are very busy with examinations this week. Next Friday will be the last day of school and closing exercises are expected to be interesting.

The Banksia rose at Mills Seminary described the other day in an Oakland paper has a rival in the one on Mr. Shinn's place here at Niles.

Choir rehearsal last Saturday evening was quite well attended. The young ladies are preparing themselves for "Children's Day," which will soon be here.

Five young men, James Clarke, Peter Crosby, Harry Mosher, Frank Mortimer and Harry Ellsworth will give a dancing party on the 5th of June. Very pretty invitations have been issued.

Mrs. H. A. Mayhew is having an addition built to her house. A fine dining-room will be added, and the house is to be painted and thoroughly renovated.

Mr. Strong of Sunol preached a fine sermon here Sunday. The church was decorated only with wild flowers, the result being very effective.

The Spare Minute Circle will meet with Miss Grace Chisholm next Saturday evening. It will be the last meeting for a few months, as the society adjourns for the usual summer vacation. The circle will give a picnic soon and a jolly time is anticipated.

RIGHT ON ITATA'S HEELS.

The Charleston Was a Few Miles in the Fleeing Steamer's Wake.

The Steamer Colima Saw Both the Pursuer and the Pursued—Movements of the Esmeralda.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 23.—The Pacific Mail steamer Colima, which arrived today from Panama, reports having left Acapulco on the 15th. In latitude seventeen degrees eighteen minutes north, and longitude one hundred and one degrees nineteen minutes west she sighted a steamer flying the Chilean flag and answering the description of the Itata. The latter was steering south by east.

Later in the day the Charleston appeared and spoke the Colima. On learning what had been seen the Charleston steamed away to the southward. The Charleston was at that time about one hundred and thirty miles from Acapulco, while the Itata when sighted was about sixty-five miles from shore.

The Colima reports that the Esmeralda left Acapulco on the morning of the 15th inst., and went out to sea, but was seen near that harbor in the evening. The Itata was expected to arrive there on the 15th, and it was supposed the Esmeralda was waiting for her.

WILL FIGHT AGAIN.

Peter Jackson Wishes to Have Another Go at Corbett.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 23.—Peter Jackson said today that unless he heard from the Sydney Gymnastic Club within ten days regarding the proposed match with Goddard, he would agree to meet Corbett again within three months; and if he fought Goddard and won he would return and arrange for another match with Corbett.

MIRACLES DOUBTED.

Does Pastor Dixon Believe the Jonah Story?

REV. DR. MORSE'S CHARGE OF HERESY.

The Baccalaureate Sermon Preached by Dr. Morse to Correct Some of "Mr. Dixon's Errors."

The Rev. Dr. S. B. Morse, president of the Baptist College at Highland Park, did openly accuse at prayer meeting on Thursday evening the Rev. Frank Dixon, pastor of the Tenth-Avenue Baptist Church, of heresy. He said to Pastor Dixon in the presence of the congregation: "The parents of children in this parish have told me that they would not allow their children to come to this church any more because of the ideas taught here. Hardly a word that has been preached here has been orthodox. The teachings have been heretical. The miracles of the Bible have been denied from the story of Jonah down."

The account of the events at the prayer meeting was printed last evening exclusively in THE TRIBUNE. Mr. Dixon declined to speak of the matter to a reporter.

Dr. Morse said yesterday: "I did accuse Dr. Dixon of heresy. Not in my sermon of Sunday, but at the meeting Thursday night. I told Mr. Dixon that I meant no personal attack. I did not attack him. I attacked the error. I told him it was not for him to talk of his pulpit, for it was as much mine or any other member's as it was his, and that he should not come across the continent and tell us those things when he knew that at heart he was not a Baptist.

"I will tell you exactly how the whole matter came about. The sermon that I preached on Sunday last was prepared by me to preach before the students of the college. A request was sent me by some of the members of the First Baptist Church of Oakland to deliver it there, and at the same time a request came from Mr. Dixon that I deliver it at the Tenth Avenue Church. I accepted the latter invitation. That sermon was all prepared when Mr. Dixon invited me to preach, and I delivered it exactly as it had been prepared. It was from Jeremiah, ix:23, 'Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, but let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, saith the Lord.' The subject was: 'The Relation of Scientific Thought to Revelation.' As I have said, there was no personal attack, but the sermon cut across the lines that Mr. Dixon had been following. I prepared that sermon for the benefit of the college students of the California College who have been attending Mr. Dixon's church more or less, so that I might, if possible, disabuse their minds of some of the errors they had received from Mr. Dixon's pulpit.

"After the sermon was delivered Mr. Dixon seemed to take offense at it, and he appointed a committee to wait upon me. I declined to see the committee. They said that if I would make an apology, and would say that I meant no attack on Mr. Dixon nothing more would be said. No notice was sent me that the matter would come up at the meeting last night, but I was told that I had better go down, and so when the matter came up I was there. It is true that I accused him of heresy. It was then put to a vote as to whether I should be compelled to appear before a committee, and out of fifty-four present only eight voted to so compel me. The sermon will be published."

Probably no action of any kind will be taken until Mr. Dixon returns from Twin Lakes.

REV. FRANK DIXON'S PAPER.

Reference to One "Too Cowardly to Allow His Name to Be Discovered."

An Indication of the Spirit of Men Who "Ignore Courtesy and Honor as Needless Formalities."

A paper conducted by the Rev. Frank Dixon, pastor of the Tenth Avenue Baptist Church, is named from the Church, the Tenth Avenue Baptist. Some extracts from this paper were mentioned recently in an editorial article in THE TRIBUNE, and others were printed yesterday, in addition to the article describing the scene at the prayer meeting on Thursday evening when Rev. S. B. Morse, formerly pastor of the Baptist Church in East Oakland, now President of California College, the educational institution of the Baptists, accused the young pastor of heresy. The following article is taken from the last number of the paper:

TO THE PASTORS OF NORTHERN AND CENTRAL CALIFORNIA.

It is the intention of the editor of the Tenth Avenue Baptist to mail this paper to the brethren every month hereafter. We are anxious that they should see, not simply one issue, with particular attention drawn to a portion of an article, but that they should read it right through for a year. We promise to make it interesting. By the way, about that article on "Church Polity." We have not a word to retract. When we have the space we will discuss it further. Neither have we any idea of withdrawing from the Baptist pastorate. The people of the Tenth-avenue Church have kindly shown themselves pretty well pleased with their pastor, and at present we are not particularly anxious about the opinions of others. Not that we don't love others—we do; but the basis of our operations is now the corner of East Fourteenth street and Tenth avenue.

I was glad that my brethren in the pastorate saw our last number, but exceedingly sorry for the method employed by someone in bringing it to their notice. If we had thought they would have been interested in reading it, we would have sent it to them, most certainly; but we did not. Someone, too cowardly to allow his name to be discovered, fearing to come out in open, manly disagreement, yet wishing in some way to prejudice the minds of the Baptist clergy of this State against a man whom they knew but slightly, mailed a copy to many, if not all, the pastors who were going to attend the convention at Twin Lakes, with certain sentences, which we in no sense repudiate, marked, in order that they might come first of all before the eyes of those who read, and prejudice them against a fair reading. This indicates the spirit of men who are set for the defense of the "truth," as they consider, and are so convinced that those who differ from them are inspired of the devil, that they ignore courtesy and honor as needless formalities. Is such a man in a position of trust in our denomination in this State? He doubtless hates heresy very much. Such men always do. Yet they stand before the world as followers of the gentle Jesus, the open, manly, noble Christ. O Master! thy foes are of thine own household. If this man is preaching the gospel, we would not stop him, but would rejoice that, withal, Christ, in some sense, and with whatever falsehood, is preached.

PARK HOUSE.

An Elegantly Furnished Family Hotel Just Opened in This City.

Those desiring a quiet home will find such at the Park House, 473 Fourteenth street, opposite the City Hall. All the furniture and carpets are imported, and are of the richest description. The table is made as satisfying as possible, the culinary department being superintended by an experienced chef. It will be the aim of Mr. and Mrs. Stampley to have a family hotel, offering accommodations and comforts, and providing for the entertainment of its guests as no other hotel in this city can. Parties wishing rooms single or en suite, with board, are requested to call for further information and terms. An elegant lunch will be set each day for the accommodation of merchants and business men.

THE ELECTRIC LINE

Now Ready for Operation, and a Success.

The managers of the new electric line have been running cars up and down Grove street and from the power house to Berkeley. The new system works perfectly—and one thing is not observable in the Oakland line which is found in most systems is the absence of the buzzing sound. The new cars are very handsome, and they glide along over the well-laid tracks majestically. For a nice ride home the electric road will be found a great success and convenience, but when you want your trunks transferred you will find the Whitney Standard and Oakland Express the people to do it.

SATURDAY . . . . MAY 23, 1891.

It is time to begin agitating for a new Postoffice building in Oakland.

THE questionable methods employed by saloonkeeper Koenig to obtain a liquor license, are the heaviest arguments against granting his petition.

OUR Pecksniffian evening contemporary asks, "What kind of a paper is THE TRIBUNE?" It is a news paper. This is something very different from a sheet of boiler plate.

WE must have good sidewalks the entire length of Seventh street, and on Webster street, from Thirteenth street southerly. These are the first streets seen by incoming strangers.

REVERENDS Rice and Merse seem to have read imperfectly the injunction about turning the other cheek. They are engaged in what Professor Corbett would term "countering on the jaw."

IN this time of municipal awakening the owners of the shanties which still disfigure central Broadway should be public-spirited enough to tear down and build better or sell to those who would.

OAKLAND sold the flowers which it came into possession of when it cut a street through Gill's nursery, and sold them at a sacrifice. It would have been economy to have adorned the public parks with them.

NOW THAT Oakland capitalists are showing that they have faith in their own city by investing money in improvements here, it will not be long before outside capital will come rolling in to help along the city's progress.

THE property owners on Seventh street, between Washington street and Broadway, should pave the street with bituminous rock at once. The people have waded through mud and stumbled over the ruts long enough.

IF Germany is really bent upon importing Chinese to take the places of laborers in that country, California would like to negotiate a swap. We will give any odds in the way of exchange—1000 Chinamen for one German if necessary.

PUT guards on the electric and cable cars and lives will be saved. The companies will also save money, for the costs and damages to be paid in a single suit for a killing would more than pay for placing guards on all the cars in the city.

THE striking longshoremen must remember that a great deal may be accomplished in Oakland by coolness and argument, but very little by rioting and force. The sentiment of the public will be with them only when they show that their cause is just.

THE Sixth Ward Improvement Society was so successful in its efforts to better the condition of the ward, that if it would take the central Chinatown vigorously in hand, the people would feel confident that that plague spot would soon be removed from the center of the city.

IF President Huntington thought the waiting room at the Broadway depot on the local train a disgrace, what must he have thought of the tumble-down shanty which is so much in the way at Market street and that freight depot at Fourteenth and Franklin streets, which was once an abandoned stable. If the railroad wishes to win and hold forever the good opinion of the people of Oakland it should now take the lead in public improvements. That is the key to popularity and prosperity.

MANY merchants supported the Republican ticket at the last municipal election because of the plain words of the Republican platform regarding mercantile licenses. The party achieved a splendid triumph at the election. We wish to keep Oakland at the head of the list as the banner Republican city. This can only be done by proving that the party is sincere in its platforms. It will not do for the Republican Councilmen, who solemnly pledged themselves against the imposition of mercantile licenses, to violate those pledges and impose an unnecessary and burdensome tax upon the merchants of the city. Trade is already hampered enough here. It needs encouragement, not discouragement.

THE recently reorganized Board of Trade cannot win a greater popularity than by taking hold of the new annexation election and pushing it to a successful issue. The future of the board depends upon the prosperity of the city. The prosperity of the city depends in great measure upon the successful consummation of those great projects for public improvement—the dredging of Lake Merritt, the building of the boulevard and the parking of the noisome West Oakland marsh. These depend for consummation upon annexation. And annexation depends upon the new election. The board could not enlist in a worthier cause than the annexation of that outside territory.

Enterprise Wins.

The difference between the profitableness of enterprise and the lack of it in street railroad building is distinctly shown in contrasting some of the lines in San Francisco. Running out Ellis street is a cable road. Two blocks away is the Turk street line of horse cars. Two blocks further to the south is the McAllister cable. Now the Ellis street and McAllister street cable cars are taxed to their utmost to accommodate the passengers who desire to ride on them. The Turk street line has bob-tail cars. They frequently run the entire length of the route without a single passenger. Rarely does any car carry more than three fares. The cable roads pay handsomely, but notwithstanding the fact that the Turk street cars give transfer privileges to the Market street cars the road continually drains the pockets of its owners.

The Turk street cars run through a district fully as thickly settled as those penetrated by the cable lines. They are not subject to the closer competition of the cars on other lines. But they do not begin to pay. Their service is the service of other days. The people demand something better. They do not serve as a means toward the building up of suburban districts. When paralleled by a cable road anything less than half a mile away they simply cumber the street.

In this city the late Walter Blair never could be convinced that a cable road to Piedmont would pay anything like expenses. So he kept his unsatisfactory horsecars running, and if the general condition of the road was any indication of its financial condition, it was not heavily remunerative. More courageous men stepped in, built the cable and at once began reaping handsome profits, which are sure to increase rapidly with the development of the country adjoining the line of the road.

The horse cars running to Berkeley have trundled along for years to poor business. From the first day the electric road tapped a portion of the same territory it gave positive evidences of being a financial success. The horse cars on Twelfth street have never paid. Soon a cross-town electric road is to be built, and everybody who has thought over the matter believes it will pay "from the jump."

These are convincing lessons of the efficacy of enterprise and the intelligent expenditure of money. And nowhere are people quicker to appreciate financial daring and go-ahead projects when once those projects are started than right here in Oakland. There is plenty of room in this city for men with money and ideas, and many openings for the intelligent investment of capital.

THERE has been introduced what they call "Mothers' Day" in the public schools of San Francisco. Now that those High School children who didn't know the difference between right and wrong are going back to their parents, mamma should have a "day" with her slipper.

A YOUNG gentleman who was graduated from Washington College, has discovered that "The World Moves." When he comes to Oakland he will find this portion of the planet moving by electricity.

Every Day the Same.

Oakland Oracle.

Last Tuesday's TRIBUNE, issued in the usual eight-column folio form, was one of the best local papers ever issued in Oakland. It contained twenty-nine columns of reading matter, and by its handsome, newsy appearance, clearly illustrated the advantage it has over its boiler-plate contemporary.

AN ENDOWED SCHOOL

The Ten Manly Graduates From Hopkins Academy.

A CLASS OF FINE LOOKING STUDENTS.

The Academy Now on the List of Accredited Schools of the University. Graduation Exercises.

Before an audience which filled to overflowing the assembly hall of Hopkins Academy last evening ten young men were launched from school ways with auspicious circumstance. The room was prettily bedecked with flowers and greens, and presented an attractive appearance, while on the rostrum were seated the graduates and the principal of the school. The exercises were interesting throughout. The graduates showed to the public that their school education has not been for nothing. In each of the addresses by those not connected with the school the ten young men were referred to as the handsomest class ever graduated from the school. And they were handsome, manly looking young men, who seemed as though they could cope successfully with the disagreeable portion of the new world in which they enter. The class is composed of: P. W. Allen, George W. Burk, Thomas C. Denny, Gilbert F. Graham, E. S. Grigsby, R. L. Hale, R. T. McKee, R. H. Sherman, James A. White, George D. White.

Shortly after 8 o'clock the exercises opened with an invocation by Rev. Dr. Bacon. Then the numbers on the programme came in rapid succession as follows:

Essay, with salutatory, "Loop Back the Curtains"..................
G. W. Burk.
Trio—Violin 'cello and piano............Alberti
Messrs. S. J. Von Hirsch, H. and A. Bruenn.
Essay, "The Close of the Century".........
James A. White.
Essay, "Merit Makes Its Way"..............
R. H. Sherman.
Concert waltz.......................Waldteufel
Messrs. S. J. von Hirsch, H. and A. Bruenn.
Essay, "Sweetest Fruit Hath Sourest Rind"
Thomas C. Denny.
Essay, "Light Boats Sail Swift, but Greater Bulks Draw Deep"..........
R. L. Hale.
Essay, "Man Born Free is Everywhere in Chains"........................
G. F. Graham.
Essay, with valedictory, "Move On".......
Edward S. Grigsby.
Violin solo, "Romanzi"..........Wieniawsky
Messrs. von Hirsch, H. and A. Bruenn.
Address..........................
M. Kellogg, Ph. D., President State University.
Presentation of diplomas...................
Hon. J. M. Haven.
Address.................................
Principal Anderson.
Trio—Violin, 'cello and piano.........Reissinge
Messrs. von Hirsch, H. and A. Bruenn.

The essays were excellent English compositions. The music was good and was a pleasing feature of the entertainment. Following are synopsis of the essays:

"LOOP BACK THE CURTAINS"—G. W. BURK.

In the course of his remarks, Mr. Burk said: "In the uncertainty of human progress, longing for a gaze into the recesses of the past and the realms of the future, are daily, hourly, ever whirling through our minds. If we allow ourselves to contemplate the past and to meditate upon its obscurity, we are struck with its dimness. In after years, among the sweetest moments of our life will be those that tell of the saddest thoughts. As the wheel of time revolves remembrances both sad and joyous are brought vividly to our mind. History is but a reflection of bygone ages. Assyria, Media, Egypt, Chaldea, Babylon, all had their reign of dominion; their life of Oriental splendor. Likewise did Greece. We see a little child battling with the strong brawny men, toiling hopelessly against wrong, and we ask, are the curtains looped? But from such blind laborings of chance, the tired and beaten generations of men seem to find reward enough to drop one after one into the hushed and sacred realms of rest."

"THE CLOSE OF THE CENTURY"—JAMES A. WHITE.

What is time but power applied to the pedal which turns the wheel of change? And as we watch the last decade of the century, which is probably the greatest that has ever marked the course of ages, and note its ending amid universal prosperity and compare this period with the tumultuous time which witnessed its birth, we cannot but acknowledge the power of time. The greatest change this century has witnessed in a political sense is the downfall of many monarchies; for the spirit of the age is indeed a foe too mighty for any government whose institutions in any way suppress the rights and liberty of man."

"MERIT MAKES ITS WAY"—R. H. SHERMAN.

With one foot upon the road that we are going to tread in pushing our way on to fortune, we feel a pang of sorrow dart through our breast as we turn to take a farewell look at the home we have learned to love so well. We think of the many happy hours spent beneath its roof and our hearts almost fail us in the resolve. But we feel now is the time to assert our manhood, and picking up the bundle which contains all our earthly possessions, we resolutely set out on our way. Sweet and pleasant are the memories of the time when we sat wrapped in earnest study, striving to unravel the hidden meaning of some ancient philosopher. He who in school uses his own brains and ingenuity is the one who as a man is going to obtain the first position in life. He who depends on his associates for what he himself should do, in after life will be like the dry leaves of autumn, which, caught up and carried along by every gust of wind, are deposited as suits their whim.

Fortune and success rarely hunt the man; unsought for, they are not found; wished for, but not worked for, they pass us by; unbidden, they enter not into our career."

"SWEETEST FRUIT HATH SOUREST RIND"—THOMAS C. DENNY.

"In the lives of our Pilgrim forefathers, who were compelled by a tyrant's hand to leave their homes and seek protection for themselves and families on the drear and windy shores of New England, we can see Shakespeare's sweetest thoughts in the fullest sense. There they toiled and fought and prayed, but in the end they firmly planted upon that bleak and cheerless waste a giant tree, upon whose top the American eagle has built his lofty eyrie. At the root of this tree the spring of liberty took its rise. This stream, which at first was a tiny rill, has grown into a mighty river, upon whose bosom are seen the many beautiful ships of state. When the ruthless hand of death has entered the sacred sanctuary of our homes; when it has pitilessly snatched from our clasp the frail life of some loved one, why should we murmur against our hard lot? So in our own lives, when we are brought low upon our last bed of sickness, we know that in a few short hours the earth will claim us as her own, why is it that we shudder at the approach of death? Seeing that Father Time, as he makes his yearly weeding in his fair crop, can never be put off; that our life is only hung as a spider's thread, which the first heavy gust of wind will break, why complain and wish to put it by as if it were a horrible fancy, and not a stern reality? But simply let us think of it as the finishing page of our life's history. The record is made, blotted, and the page turned over to another life.

"LIGHT BOATS SAIL SWIFT BUT GREATER HULKS DRAW DEEP"—R. HALE.

Standing upon the pier we watch a yacht gracefully skimming the sunny waters of the bay, freighted with her gay and happy throng of pleasure seekers. A fit emblem it is of our lighter hours, when we will relax our diligence and seek recreation in the inspiration of the wave and favoring breezes. Further out upon the ocean moves with steady course towards its certain destination a ship. From times immemorial the story of misguided ambition has been a sad one, and heroes have fallen beneath its fell grasp. It tells us the race is not to the swift, but to the strong.

"MAN BORN FREE IS EVERYWHERE IN CHAINS"—G. GRAHAM.

From the earliest period of man's existence he has been fettered and held in check by limitations. Every element of nature, even man himself is subject to limitations. Everywhere we find nature contending against nature, man against man. Everywhere we discover insurmountable barriers—barriers which no human powers can overcome, nor any device of the human mind control. The chains by which we are bound may never be wholly cast aside, but we may perchance forge from their broken links an anchor which, when we cross the dark river, we may drop amid the coral reefs of the other shore, where man is forever made free and is never more in chains.

"MOVE ON," EDWARD S. GRIGSBY.

In this great world, in the universe which controls this world, we see nothing but motion. Everything is moving, continually dispelling the old proverb that "a rolling stone gathers no moss." If we sit quietly by and let others do the rushing we will soon find ourselves in a position from which it will be impossible to move, and we will forever be forced to push the scenes in order to set off the great work of some more active fellow being, who started out with no recommendation save the determination to push and the luck to keep on pushing.

Mr. Grigsby then delivered the valedictory, in which he thanked and complimented his teachers on behalf of the class and gave his fellow students some good advice.

Professor Martin Kellogg, Ph. D., acting president of the University of California, then spoke at length to the graduates, after which J. M. Haven, president of the Board of Trustees of the academy, presented the diplomas with a pleasing address

Principal Anderson spoke a few words about the prosperity of the academy, saying that it is now entered on the list of schools whose graduates are permitted to enter the University without entrance examinations.

After a selection by the orchestra the exercises closed. Then the friends and relatives flocked about the graduates and congratulated them on their decided success. Many of the young men live in distant cities and will go home to enter business. Surely, all have bright careers before them.

Very Important

The importance of taking a good Spring Medicine cannot be overestimated. The changing weather affects the human system in such a way that it is now in great need of and especially susceptable to the benefit to be derived from a reliable preparation like Hood's Sarsaparilla. To make your blood pure, give you a good appetite, and make you strong, this spring you should take Hoods' Sarsaparilla.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended to me as a fine medicine for skin humor, from which my children where suffering, and it did everything claimed for it. I was troubled with dyspepsia, and after using two bottles felt the happiest results. I think it a good all-round family medicine." F. E. CLARK, next to Post Office, Seattle, Wash.

The Spring Medicine

"Hood's Sarsaparilla is valuable as a spring medicine; it invigorates the whole system and tones up the stomach, and since I became acquainted with Hood's Sarsaparilla I always take several bottles in the spring, and, as occasion requires, the rest of the year." L. U. GILMAN, Aurelia, Iowa.

Well, thank the Lord, the first chapter of the Manfelot-Crowley affair is ended, and that brave and sensible young gentleman, Justice Allen has rendered a decision which shows that he is not influenced by popular prejudice against a man, no matter whether such prejudice be just or unjust. Of course I am not expected to know much about law, but papa, who knows lots about it, says the decision was very lawyer-like and correct. Now, I do hope people will find something else to talk about for a time at least. This subject is not a particularly elevating one.

The flotsam and jetsam of the Athenian Club "ladies' chirps" continues to reach me, and I "mourn and mourn and mourn," like the bilious dove in the song, because I wasn't there to see the fun and get some good news at first hand. One whisper surprises me considerably. It is that Jessie, Katie, Nannie, Bessie and Jim talked so audibly during the entertainment that they annoyed everybody in their part of the room. They really ought to know better than that. I am surprised that a man of Jim's good sense would permit himself to do such a thing.

How fond those Athenian boys are of dear old Vance. He makes it his business to see that everybody has a good time. Did you ever see any hitch in the banquet portion of the programme at an Athenian Club entertainment? I'll venture to say you didn't; and that significant fact is due to Vance's good management. Then the dear old fellow is so genuinely courteous and attentive to us girls on the rare occasions when we are guests of the club, that we are very, very fond of him.

What an awful thing it was for those High School boys to get caught cheating in examinations. Boys! Boys! Cheat all you want to, but it is horribly sinful to get caught. When Harry Houghton and I went to school together we never got caught cheating.

Speaking of schools reminds me that the standard of scholastic beauty is becoming higher. I can remember when the "co-ed" at the University was looked upon as the ultimate freak of ugliness. The boys let her severely alone, and the girls guyed her "dowdy" way of dressing. But all that is changed now. Some of the prettiest girls we have are "co-eds" or ex "co-eds." There is stately Mabel Craft for example, who finds time enough from her studies to go considerably into society with her mother. I hear both looked charming at the Kings' party last week.

One of our prettiest and most charming girls is Miss Elsie Lee, sister of our sweet Mrs. Fred Stratton. She is a graduate of the University and stood second in her class at graduation, I believe.

There are many Oakland ladies who have attended some of the famous ladies' colleges of the country. Vassar is represented by Mesdames Fred and Will Henshaw, the Misses Wellman and others, while graduates of Wellseley and Smith are found here and there in our society.

Speaking of schools reminds me that Oakland's annual crop of "sweet girl graduates" is being harvested. I believe I spoke of this last week, but it is a fruitful subject. The managers of Snell Seminary, that nursery of fair young womanhood, have this year adopted the sensible plan of having only three or four essays read. As one of the people of Oakland, I take this opportunity publicly to thank the faculty of Snell Seminary for their consideration. We went last Thursday night, looked at the pretty graduates and their stylish gowns, without suffering too much from their sermonizing. It is so much nicer than the old plan of having each one speak her little piece; besides it is very much easier for the teacher whose duty it is to write the essays.

By the way, one of the Snell Seminary girls tells me that Harry Haight, Harry Melvin, Karl Howard and some San Francisco young man are going to organize a male quartet. Wonder how she knows so much? Well, I'm glad if the news is true. These boys all sing well, if they are conceited about it.

Big rosy-cheeked Marston Campbell is soon to desert the brotherhood of bachelors. Alas! Another chance gone for me, and I was so fond of "Mars," too.

The wedding of Colonel Isaac de Russy, United States Army, and Miss Laura Requa was one of those quietly correct affairs that we see so seldom. The majority of weddings, I am sorry to say, are characterized by too much ostentation, or else by some breach of good taste; but his was an ideally perfect one. The church was beautifully decorated by Miss Mary Bates, whose wizard touch had made the pretty interior infinitely more beautiful, without allowing any of the decorations to destroy the architectural harmonies. I don't know what that means, but a prominent architect who saw the decorations said something like that. I will not go into the particulars as to attendants, etc., as you have read all about that in the papers. I merely want to call attention to an item that the papers seem to have neglected—it was not a military wedding. This speaks volumes for the good sense of the groom. My experience with army officers (acquired in many a campaign with the heroes who have been stationed about the bay at different times during past years) has taught me that modesty increases with rank. I never knew a field officer who displayed his uniform on all possible occasions, but I have known very junior lieutenants who were perfectly miserable out of "the blue." Imagine if you can a second lieutenant marrying without his gold lace.

One feature of the published accounts of the wedding made me smile very broadly. In one paper I read:

"The groom is a scion of an ancient and honorable family, which for many generations has had a distinguished representative in the national army. His father was a Colonel of Engineers during the civil war and an uncle wore a General's straps in the Confederate army," etc.

Then I picked up another paper, and after wading through the preliminary "gush" learned that "The groom is a scion of an ancient and honorable family," etc. Still another journal of "largest circulation" informed me that "The groom is a scion," etc. So it went on through the entire list. It is a blessing to find the newspapers agreed on any one point, but whence comes this wonderful unanimity.

Miss Louie Bromwell's party last Thursday evening was a very pretty affair, attended almost exclusively by the younger set. It makes me feel positively patriarchal when I see boys and girls whom I knew as toddlers blossoming out as full-fledged society people. (That's rather a mixed metaphor, but I claim a woman's privilege of being free from the restraints of grammar, rhetoric and logic.) THE MEDDLER.

Snell Seminary Reunion.

A charming party was given last evening at Snell Seminary. The graduates of this year and many of the alumnae were present and danced away a merry evening in the beautifully decorated rooms.

Among the alumnae present were Mrs. James Maclise, Miss Elizabeth B. Clift, Miss Alice M. Flint, Miss Mary G. Hutchinson, Miss Josephine Brown, Miss Hattie E. Bullard, Miss May L. D. Baldwin, Miss Carne B. Clisby, Miss Jennie Brin, Miss Lela B. Browning, Miss Frances J. Merriman, Miss Elizabeth Browning, Miss Alice M. Buswell, Miss Lillias G. Carothers, Miss Lizzie C. Chapman, Miss Abbie L. Fay, Miss Laura C. Huffman, Miss Mary E. Stewart.

All the members of the graduating class of this year were present.

Among others present were Mr. and Mrs. Berton, James Maclise, the following officers of the cutter Rush: Dr. Brown, Lieutenant Coyle, Lieutenant Dodge, Lieutenant Miles and Lieutenant Doyle; also Mr. and Mrs. John T. Miss Bromwell's Party.

At the elegant home of Colonel and Mrs. L. L. Bromwell, corner of Madison and Ninth streets, Miss Bromwell entertained on Thursday evening about thirty young friends, who assembled at her invitation to meet the Misses Little of Cleveland, O. The house is particularly appropriate for entertaining, as the large rooms and spacious hall on the main floor open into one another. The rooms were beautifully embellished with tasteful decorations, and the guests enjoyed dancing and delicious refreshments.

A Reception to Graduates.

The parlors of the First Congregational Church were crowded last Tuesday evening, when the Young People's Society of the church tendered a reception to the graduates of May, '91, of Oakland. The rooms were prettily decorated for the occasion with flowers and greens, while dainty lemonade booths under canopies of yellow muslin added to the beauty of the festive scene. Representatives from Fields Seminary, Mills College and Snell Seminary, from the High school, Hopkins Academy, University, and other schools were present.

The early part of the evening was devoted to listening to a musicale of rare merit. The programme was as follows:

Mill in the Forest ..... Eilenberg

(With violin obligato.)

Later in the evening Mrs. Blake-Alvison again sang, and Miss Mabel Caswell and Mrs. Blake-Alvison sang a duet entitled "Life's Dream Is O'er."

The entertainment was interesting throughout, and many of the participants were obliged to acknowledge the hearty applause which followed their numbers with other selections. At its conclusion a promenade conversazione was the order. The young men selected their partners and promenaded about the room, keeping time to sweet music furnished by the orchestra. They conversed on the different topics assigned them with great interest. Lemonade was furnished during the evening and a merry time enjoyed by all.

Among those present were: Frank Leach, Herbert Kellogg, A. T. Stewart, Miss Carrie Goodhue, Miss Sadie Austin, Miss Mary McLean, T. Denny, Miss Jennie Bush, Will Kincaid, D. D. Barnard, Miss Annie Barrington, Miss Grace Fisher, Ed Lyon, Frank Wilder, Fred Monnett, Miss Emily Sharratt, Harry Thomas, Miss Carrie Painter, Miss Florence Havens, Mr. Swain, Arthur North, Miss Susie Smith, Miss Kate Martin, Miss Ella Brown, Miss Etta Miller, Miss Bessie Penniman, Phil Freer, Miss Gertrude Vincent, Robert Sheldon, Miss Muriel Bayley, Ott Breed, S. The Lawton-Day Wedding.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Bush, on Fifteenth and Brush streets, was the scene of a pretty wedding last Wednesday evening, when Rev. J. B. Rutter of the First Methodist Church united in marriage Miss Eva Grace Day and Burt E. Lawton. The bride is a sister of Mrs. Bush, and is an accomplished young lady. The bride's sister, Miss Maude Day, acted as bridesmaid, and Henry Kilborn officiated as groomsman. The young bride, a charming blonde, was attired in a beautiful dove-colored surah silk gown, and held during the nuptial ceremony a lovely bouquet of La France roses. The bridesmaid was robed in a gown of cream-colored surah silk.

The impressive ceremony was performed under a large floral bell of La France roses, pendant in the recess formed by the bay windows. The floral decorations throughout the hallways and rooms of the large residence were elaborate and beautiful.

At the conclusion of the ceremony a sumptuous repast was enjoyed by all in the dining room, which was prettily arranged. While the blushing bride was presiding at the wedding feast a quartet club of string instruments, located on the front lawn under a blooming magnolia, discoursed sweet music. After supper there came in merry rotation the dance, and when the couple departed at 11 o'clock for San Francisco it was amid a shower of rice and old shoes. Numerous presents were received by the young couple, both useful and ornamental. Among those at the happy wedding party were many friends from this city and relatives of the bride from Sacramento. Mr. and Mrs. Lawton will receive at 705 Sixteenth street Thursday.

The Society Game.

A Tiddlewinks party was given last Tuesday evening at the residence of Miss Baretta on Fourth avenue, and it proved a most enjoyable affair. Mrs. Blake Alverson, Miss Beretta, Mrs. Smith and Miss Lucy Bigler favored the guests with several vocal selections. Then the game was taken up, and Kirby Smith captured the first prize, while Miss Thompson won the consolation prize. At a late hour a sumptuous feast was spread, at which the guests lingered until early in the morning. Among those present were: Miss Thompson, Miss Edith Davis, Miss Lucy Byler, Mr. and Mrs. Mayer Smith, Mrs. Blake Alverson, I. Beretta, Kirby Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Byler and Caesar Beretta.

CALIFORNIA CHAMPAGNES.

A Letter by Eugene Cantin in a New York Paper.

Eugene J. Cantin, who used to live in Oakland, writes to the New York Tribune:

"A telegram from San Francisco appears in the Tribune of this morning announcing Senator Stanford's intention of engaging in the production of champagne at his vineyard in Tehama county, California. This announcement may or may not be correct, but the comments following it are contradictory and misleading, in proof of which I desire to call your attention to the following points, believing that the Tribune's sense of fairness will permit this correction through its columns of the wrong impression created by the telegram.

Passing without comment the remark that the champagne produced in California for the last thirty years by Arpad Haraszthy "leaves much to be desired"—a statement that will at once be controverted by hundred of critical champagne-drinkers in New York City, by twenty-six medals awarded it at exhibitions in various parts of the world, and by its being in the place of honor at the recent banquet of the Tariff League—which seems to have come from an unfriendly source, an emphatic objection must be made to the statement that, under the patronage of Senator Stanford, even though it be insignificant and without limit, the problem (?) whether or not California can make champagne "equal to the best French brands" is to "be settled in two or three years."

It is such statements as this that bring ridicule down upon the producers of California wines, good and bad, and unfortunately hurts most the earnest, patient vigneron, who perhaps has devoted a lifetime to the study of grapes, congenial soils, and climatic conditions and blending.

It has required several centuries to bring the French champagnes to their present state. With all the advantages of the Frenchman's experience it has taken thirty years for Haraszthy to bring his wine where it is, and now someone "rushes in where angels fear to tread," and in three short years proposes to decide once and for all the question (?) whether California can produce a champagne "equal to the best French brands" or not. If, at the end of this period, the champagne put forth is not "equal to the best French brands," it will be a confession that California soil and climate are against the making of this finest of wines. The idea is preposterous that an experiment of two or three years in making champagne from grapes grown upon the heavy alluvial soil of a vineyard lying deep down in the valley of the Sacramento and as flat as a floor, is to decide whether a good champagne can be made in California or not; when in other portions of the State there are to be found growing and ripening to perfection the choicest grape varieties transplanted from the department of Marne to a similar soil in the foothills of the bay counties of California, and producing a Brut champagne which English experts pronounce equal to Brut wine of the Pommery cellars.

Those familiar with the subject who have the interest of our native products at heart will wish Senator Stanford success in producing something that will be a credit to California, but they will not concede that his results at the end of two or three years are to decide whether California can or cannot make a champagne "equal to the best French brands," or that California today does not produce such an article.

Yours truly, EUGENE J. CANTIN.

AGAINST THE POOLROOMS.

The Temperance Union Convention Makes a Declaration.

The Alameda County Woman's Christian Temperance Union Convention closed its session in Berkeley last evening. Before adjourning they adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Alameda county do most deeply deplore the action of the City Council of Oakland in allowing the poolrooms to be opened in our metropolis, especially in the face of the earnest protests from the best citizens. The thanks of all women are due to Dr. Dille for his earnest sermons; also Dr. Pardee, Mr. Nelson and Mr. Johnston for their votes against this infamous outrage.

Resolved, That we most heartily thank Dr. Pardee for his gallant fight for the people of Twenty-third avenue in their protest against a saloon license being granted to any one in that vicinity.

Resolved, That we extend to the Berkeley Union our thanks for the work already done, and urge them to renewed diligence in securing testimony that shall detect and expose the illegal sale of intoxicants, and we pledge to this union our fullest co-operation. We also congratulate the noble students of the University who, at the recent banquet to the President of the United States, refused to follow his example in drinking wine, but drank the toasts in water.

Resolved, That there be concerted action in our unions to secure town ordinances prohibiting the sale of tobacco to minors.

Meals and Morals

WE devote about three hours a day to our meals. These represent much of the social intercourse of the family. How very important then that all the meals should be good—that enjoyment—good humor—health and strength—should abound in these hours of the family life. How short sighted to make the meals less refreshing to mind and body by buying poor spices and extracts—when for a trifle more you can get the best.

SCHILLING'S BEST are standard culinary supplies. Their rich flavors charm the keenest tastes. Their positive strength and spreading power make them economical. They cost a trifle more than poorer goods—but do more—do it better. One honest trial will prove it.

FAIR FIELD GIRLS.

Two Graduates of a Popular Oakland Seminary.

PRETTY ENTERTAINMENT AT THE SCHOOL

The Young Lady Students Who Have Won Honor During the Term That Has Just Ended.

It was a pleasing spectable in the cosy class-room at Field's Seminary yesterday evening. With festoons and floral drapings the walls were bedecked, with yellow and black, the colors of the class of '91, while all about huge spiders' webs wove in gold cord taught the simple homily of industry. An owl perched on a crescent overhung the piano, and formed a relief to the opposite side of the wall, where in fresh-gathered marigolds was worked the word "Moderation," the class motto. "Haste not, rest not," was another piece of advice that confronted the observer, and as the eyes wandered around the blackboards on the sides of the room they saw appropriate quotations from favorite poets.

There were plenty to enjoy the pretty sight and to participate in the commencement exercises of the evening, for of the 600 invitations issued, nearly all found ready respondents and the classroom was perforce somewhat taxed for accommodations. The graduates were two in number. Miss Emma Bumiller and Miss Lucy M. Browne, though Miss Flora Fillmore also figured in the honors, having been granted a certificate for partial course. This is not all of the roll of merit though, for Thursday witnessed the closing exercises of the Academic Department and the following young ladies were granted diplomas of honor for the term: Flora Fillmore, Emma Bumiller, Mabel Norris, Rose Rider, Blanche Giddings, Mary Haynes, Connie Gardner, Minnie Gardner, Lucy Browne, Hallie Hyde, Maie Stapp, Nanny Townley, Addie Slaughter, Bertie Pratt, Daisy Hamilton.

Star testimonials on the year's standing were also granted to the six highest pupils, their ranking being in the following order: Flora Fillmore, Emma Bumiller, Rose Rider, Blanche Giddings, Mabel Norris, Minnie Gardner.

Of these Miss Flora Fillmore was granted a gold star on an average of 10.

But to return to the exercises of last evening. The programme opened with an invocation by the Rev. George Moore, D. D., and then Miss Helen Siegfried executed very prettily on the piano Chopin's waltz, A flat major, op. 42.

The first essayist came next in the person of Miss Flora Fillmore, who gave an interesting paper on "Themistocles." It opened with a comparison of this hero with Aristides, a boy with him "in Athens, the violet-wreathed, as poets loved to style her, during the magnificent rule of the Pisistratidae, a time when human intellect was quickened on every side, touched by the plastic arts, by music, by the quickening eagerness of souls that in the Periclean era brought forth the many sects of philosophers." The "self-willed boy" was followed through the passing years until having attained manhood, "the Persian war gave opportunity for the display of his quick judgment, ready wit, presence of mind and wonderfully clear intellect." She then presented to us the man, and we saw his envy of Miltiades, his rise to power, his earnest pleading for a navy, final success, the opposition of Aristides and his party, the masterly strategy which defeated the mighty Persians in the battle of Salamis, and the completion of the Piraeus, his especial pride. With her we next followed him in his misfortune, saw him banished from his native city, "fleeing as a criminal from one place to another," taking refuge with Antaxerxes, becoming again in Persia a person of importance, and released by death from a "painful struggle between his consciousness of what he ought to do and his inability to solve the complication in which he had become involved."

Miss Meigh Williams next recited the "Boat Race" in capital style, and a waltz song, "Perfumes of the Orient," by Miss Hattie de V. Forker, accompanied by Miss Lorena Knapp, followed.

Then came an essay by Miss Lucy M. Browne, one of the graduates.

"The Light of the World" was the subject of her address, and the "grandeur of the all-powerful and glorious sun, which reigns over our system like a mighty sovereign," was well described. She gave the Persian myth of "the strife between the gods before Ormasdeg appointed the sun leader of the starry hosts," and told of "his dangerous foe, a wicked dragon disguised as the harmless moon, but driven away by the shouts of his faithful worshipers, whose devotion stands before us as an example worthy of imitation." Having followed him as he sank below the gilded horizon till man was enveloped in darkness, she paid a most worthy tribute to the beauty of "the pale and gentle moon," as she recognized "the gracious guardianship of the sun in permitting her to usurp his throne, and with the merry, twinkling stars to lead us to dreamland and sweet forgetfulness." "The mysterious stillness of the night" was made, however, to add to the grandeur of the greater light. Of the moon and stars she said, "No rivals are these."

> The night has a thousand eyes,
> And the day but one.
> Yet the light of the world lies
> With the light of the dying sun.

A clever piano solo, "La Cascade," by Miss Flora Fillmore, and a well acted recitation, "King Robert of Sicily" by Miss Blanche Giddings opened the second part of the programme, and preceded the appearance of the closing essayist and other graduate, Miss Emma Bumiller.

Miss Bumiller's essay was entitled, "Nothing Succeeds Like Success," and was a pleasing evidence of what may be accomplished by that "complete culture of the mental faculties" which she deems "success in its highest sense." Having agreed with "the world's verdict that 'nothing succeeds like success,'" she contrasted it with failure, claiming that the latter "borders upon crime, as it generally means misplaced time, effort and hope." With "the moralists of all ages" she believed "that patience and perseverance are sure of their reward, and that by untiring effort one may become skillful in any line of work," as Henry Clay's careful training fitted him for the career of which his countrymen are justly proud. "Wellington's success at Waterloo, the result of his habit of close attention to the physical features of the country," was cited as evidence of the power gained by "exact attention to detail." Self command and self control were pronounced all important in securing success, proved by "the many who have missed fame through their hurried efforts to seize it." As proof that "the same qualities insure success in all the different walks of life," references were made to Lytton, Faraday, Arkwright, Stephenson, Brassy and George Moore. Lastly it was convincingly stated that "success lies in doing one's duty," and that "the compensation of earnestness and judicious effort comes to all who will."

Piano solos of Nevin's "Slumber Song" and Moszkowski's "Minature" ended all too soon the pleasing programme and then the diplomas were conferred.

Rev. Robert Ritchie made a closing address and the commencement exercises of the class of '91 were over.

The next term will begin on July 29th.

A DEPOSIT OF $200,000

Made by the California Safe Deposit and Trust Company, San Francisco, With the Treasurer of State, for the Benefit of the Depositors of the Corporation.

Under an act of the last Legislature entitled "An Act authorizing certain corporations to act as executors, and in other capacities, and to provide for and regulate the administration of trusts by such corporations," approved April 6th, 1891, it becomes necessary for any corporation doing a trust business to deposit with the Treasurer of State, for the benifit of depositors of such corporation, the sum of $200,000 in bonds of the United States, or in mortgages on improved and productive real estate in this State, being first liens, and the real estate being worth at least twice the amount loaned thereon.

The California Safe Deposit and Trust Company, San Francisco, has qualified under this law by placing with the Treasurer of State real estate securities to the amount of $200,000.

In the matter of convenience, security and legal protection the advantages of dealing with a trust company as compared with an individual or firm are very marked, while the responsibilities and restraints to, which trust companies as a class are subjected render them peculiarly safe depositories.

The high character and business standing of the Directors of the California Safe Deposit and Trust Company and its paid up capital of $1,000,000 are ample guarantee of its responsibility.

This company pays interest at the rate of two (2) per cent per annum on daily balances averaging $300 and upwards.

It also issues Certificates of Deposit, payable on demand, or on five days notice, or at a fixed time, on which special rates of interest are allowed. Parties having surplus or idle funds, and who do not care to open an account, will find these certificates very advantageous.

The company offers to executors and trustees of estates and to religious and benevolent institutions and fraternal societies exceptional facilities for the transaction of their business.

On ordinary and term deposits in the savings department the company will pay the highest rates of interest consistent with prudent banking.

Executors, administrators, guardians, receivers, etc., who deposit their funds with this company are exempt by law from all personal liability.

ALDEN TRACT,

OAKLAND.

THE unsold portion of this beautiful tract of land is now being offered at private sale on easy terms by the undersigned. Parties desiring to purchase can call on them, either at their office in Oakland or at their branch office on Adeline street, at Lorin.

The soil of this tract is excellent. The drainage is perfect for the entire tract. There is no gulch or hilly surface tending to obstruct the view, but the tract slopes gradually from the Contra Costa Range of mountains to the bay of San Francisco, presenting one of the most beautiful views of mountain and sea to be found in the world.

The Golden Gate is immediately opposite the tract and in full view of it.

The climate is simply perfect. This property lies in the line of Oakland's greatest improvement, and is destined to be the center of the future city. The distance from Oakland is half a mile.

There are half hourly communications with San Francisco run through this tract.

The Oakland and Berkeley Rapid Transit Company's cars

Five great thoroughfares, viz: Adeline, Linden, Market, West and Grove streets, traverse the tract, connecting it with Oakland and Berkeley and the intermediate country, while Telegraph avenue is on the East within a block of it.

There are five fine public schools in the immediate vicinity.

OAKLAND, March 17th, 1891.

Having suffered for a long time from a peculiar stomach trouble, originally caused from the use of tobacco. I tried many physicians, but found no permanent relief until I consulted Dr. Bluett, 1069 Broadway, Oakland, and under whose treatment I have entirely recovered. I would urge upon all sufferers from indigestion and dyspepsia to apply to him at once, and I am satisfied that you will never regret it. I consider the doctor permanently qualified to treat troubles of his nature.

KIPLING'S FATHER.

He Is Very Clever as Well as His Gifted Son.

HE WILL WRITE AND ILLUSTRATE A BOOK

The Literary Society of New York—Mr. Howells to Move From Boston to New York.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

NEW YORK, May 1891.

The meteoric success of Rudyard Kipling has been so brilliant as to throw into obscurity the fact that the talented son is only an offspring of a very clever father. Perhaps Mr. Kipling Sr., might never have thought of coming before the public if his son had not made such a stir; but, be that as it may, a book by the father will shortly appear. It will be descriptive of his travels in India, which country the elder Kipling knows from one end to the other. For years he has traversed every part of it, and his experiences on these journeys will form the subject matter of his volume. Besides being an expert traveler, the elder Kipling is more than an ordinary adept with the pencil. He sketches well and accurately, and will be the illustrator as well as the author of his book. The volume will be called "Beast and Man in India," and from it the literary world will perhaps discover that the talents of Rudyard Kipling are his by inheritance.

MR. HOWELLS AS A NEW YORKER.

Next fall will see Mr. Howells as a permanent resident of New York. The novelist will in all probability give up his Boston home early in the summer, and after a few weeks at the New England resorts he will come to New York. The winter before last Mr. Howells tried a winter in New York, and his return to Boston set wagging a number of tongues which said that Mr. Howells had failed to receive the social attention he expected in the metropolis, and had therefore concluded to return to Boston. Nothing is farther, however, from the truth. Mr. Howells was made much of in New York when he resided there, and both he and Mrs. Howells were the recipients of more social attention than it was possible for them to accept. Few literary men have more friends on Manhattan island than has Mr. Howells, and he will at once take a most conspicuous position in New York society when he comes to the city next winter. We are not as yet so rich in true literary celebrities in New York that a man of Mr. Howells' importance is lost sight of when he comes here as a resident. The novelist will, on the other hand, have a foremost position among New York literati, and he will be more cordially welcomed than almost any one of his contemporaries who today could come to the city to reside.

NEW YORK'S LITERARY SOCIETY.

The great trouble with literary circles in New York today is that it lacks just such men of importance in the world of letters as Mr. Howells. No city of its size in the world has so few really great literary celebrities within its midst. In several quarters there are some delightful coteries, but when you say that these coteries are about three in number, you have said all you can. What is generally regarded as New York literary society is in reality not of it at all. There is not another city in America which has within its borders such a perfect raft of cheap literary workers who come together, have their mutual admiration meetings puffed by the press, and are considered by the outer world to comprise the New York literati. These men and women have been drawn to the metropolis because, being the largest city of business in the union, it affords the most probable market for the output of their wares. But to identify them with literature is to scandalize the world. The Fellowcraft Club knows them not, nor does the Authors' Club. In the parlors of Mr. Gilder, Mr. Stedman, Mrs. Custer or Mr. Stoddard they are unseen, and yet these are the places where congregate what really constitutes New York's literary society. To say that New York is without as dignified and substantial a literary social element as any city in the union is the cry of the ignorant; to say that that element can be strengthened by just such men as Mr. Howells is to state the truth.

THE STORY OF A BOOK CLERK.

Mark Twain told me a good story the other day. It illustrated his point that all the clerks in our book stores are not the best informed in literary matters.

The humorist's wife and a friend recently went into a book store, in a city of good size not many miles from New York.

Accosting a clerk, Mrs. Clemens said that her friend desired to secure a copy of Taine's "Ancient Regime."

"Beg pardon," said the clerk, "what book did you say?"

Mrs. Clemens repeated the author and title of the book.

Going to the rear of the store the clerk soon returned only to inquire: "May I ask you to repeat the name of the author?"

"Why, Taine," replied Mrs. Clemens, becoming a little annoyed.

Assuming an air of superior knowledge and looking at his customers with a piteous glance of sympathy he ventured to Mrs. Clemens:

"Pardon me, madam, but you have the name a trifle wrong. You mean Twain—not Taine."

And it takes Mark Twain to tell the story.

EDMUND CLARENCE STEDMAN'S SUCCESS.

Seeing Edmund Clarence Stedman on Madison square last week recalled his interesting career to me. Mr. Stedman had every educational advantage for a literary life. He is of excellent family and education. His mother held a reputation as a clever writer of verses, and is favorably known in literary circles. Mr. Stedman is an alumnus of Yale, graduating in 1853. He began work in Norwich, Conn., as early as 1852, and afterwards became editor of the Herald in Winsted, Conn., where he remained until 1855, when he removed to New York, and, in 1860, became a member of the Tribune staff. Later he was war correspondent of the New York World. His ambition was always to secure success in literary lines, and to achieve this he was compelled at first to struggle hard for support. It was in 1859 that he made his first success in his poem, "Diamond Wedding," contributed to the Tribune. This was republished many times in this country and Europe and created a genuine sensation. A certain Lieutenant Bartlett of the United States Navy, detecting personal allusions in the poem to the recent marriage of his daughter to a wealthy Cuban, challenged Mr. Stedman to a duel, but the affair never took place. A number of other poems followed soon after, all of which were more or less successful. Feeling the pressure of necessity Mr. Stedman gave up journalism and went into Wall street, where he made a modest fortune for himself, continuing his literary work in leisure moments. It was later that he achieved his greatest success as a literary critic in his "Victorian Poets," which placed him in the first rank of American writers. From the sales of this work and its companion, "Poets of America," he derived quite a comfortable income each year.

THE LATEST LITERARY GOSSIP.

A letter from Max O'Rell tells me that the witty Englishman will try his fortunes again on the American platform next season. After his American tour he will lecture through the Australian colonies. "But this will be my farewell one for certain," writes Mr. Blouet.

Mr. Burlingame, the editor of Scribner's, has joined the American literary forces already on the other side of the Atlantic. He will be gone for two months.

Horatio Alger's boys' books have reached Norway, and are being translated into the language of that country.

Hon. Oscar Straus, our ex-minister to Turkey, who is a literary man as well as a diplomat, is soon to publish his life of Roger Williams, the founder of religious liberty, upon which he has been engaged for some years.

I was told the other day by the publishers that the sales of General Grant's book still continue, moderately, of course, but sufficiently large to warrant putting it on the press twice each year.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox is investing a portion of her literary earnings in building an out-of-town home, to which she will hereafter go each summer. It is being built on a projected rock on Long Island sound, an hour or two ride from New York. The poetess calls it her "bungalo," the Indian name for a home, and she expects to occupy it in about a month.

Joel Chandler Harris' wife is the author's best assistant. She looks over his manuscripts before they go out, often advises upon them, and keeps a scrap book filled with press notices of her husband's published writings.

Miss Duncan's clever book, "A Social Departure," has gone into its fourth edition, while her "American Girl in London," recently published, has reached its second time on the presses.

Amelia E. Barr's new story, to be published in Lippincott's, will have for its name the attractive title of "A Rose of a Hundred Leaves." EDWARD W. BOK.

DR. CROWLEY FINED.

Sentenced for Battery on Professor Mansfeldt.

"People vs. D. D. Crowley," called Clerk O'Brien in the Police Court this morning.

In response to the call, Dr. Crowley, accompanied by his counsel, R. M. Fitzgerald, came into court, and the latter announced that he would waive the reading of the complaint and enter a plea of guilty.

"It is unnecessary for me to make a statement in this case, as your Honor is familiar with the facts, having heard the testimony in the felony examination," said Mr. Fitzgerald. "We will take sentence now."

"Your Honor is familiar with all the facts in the case," said Prosecuting Attorney Church.

Judge Allen then sentenced Dr. Crowley to pay a fine of $100. He paid the money to the clerk, and that ended the celebrated case.

CHURCH WEDS THE SIXTH TIME

His Companion, Laura Keefe, Achieves the Honor of Wifehood.

John H. Church was married on Thursday evening to Laura Keefe, who has been seen with him constantly for several months. He is 51 years old and she is 18. John H. Church's first wife was Mrs. Sarah C. Goodwin, whom he married in 1859 in New York, by whom he had two children. In 1870 they separated, and shortly afterward he joined fortunes with Zoe Gayton, from whom he parted in 1886. Agnes Kennedy, otherwise known as Laura Honey, was his next wife, and she also had two children. Then Miss Nettie McGee became Mrs. Church, and was in due time succeeded by Miss Catalina Pico, from whom he was divorced last Monday.

Professor Dickinson on Evolution.

Professor Dickinson, brother to Anna Dickinson, will deliver a lecture on the subject of "Evolution" in the First Methodist Church on Tuesday evening, the 26th. Professor Dickinson believes not only in Bible revelation, but also in the revelation in evolution of nature. He speaks not as an echo, but as one who has studied and discerned great truths of nature.

A PRINCE COMING TO OAKLAND

Arrangements Pending for the Visit of the Czarewitch of Russia.

The approaching visit of the young Czarowitch has already got society on the alert, and the reception to the globe-trotting heir to the empiric throne of Russia will be festive indeed. His stay in San Francisco will necessarily be somewhat short, but his advance courier, Mr. Cranowsky has already made arrangements for the young Prince to stay at least one day in Oakland so that he may see the beauties on this side of the bay. Mr. Cranowsky has in past been making preparations for the affair, and among the other important things he has attended to is as regards the handling of the Prince's baggage, of which there is as much as usually accompanies a prima donna. Mr. Cranowsky of course wanted to know the best and quickest way to have the trunks handled between here and San Francisco, and was told that there was no firm in the business equal to the People's Express Company of 450 Tenth street. The contract will accordingly be given to that enterprising organization.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past certain agents of Eastern pianos represented in Oakland have been carrying out a policy of misrepresentation and defamation against the Bruenn pianos.

Alarmed at the progress made by the Bruenn pianos the various agents are banded together in the attempt to crush out this Oakland industry, and by a course of misrepresentation as to the piano and personal abuse as to the manufacturer they are seeking to injure the sale of these splendid instruments which are conceded by the trade in general to be the best pianos ever manufactured on the coast.

The reason is plain. Knowing that as mere dealers they cannot compete with a manufacturer they seek to accomplish by foul means what they cannot do by fair.

It is a well known fact that the best-toned pianos made by Eastern manufacturers are retained by them to sell at retail in their own warerooms, while the poorer grades are sent to this coast for their agents to sell to the public at a profit of often double the Dutch-man's per cent.

To do this it becomes necessary to down the Bruenn pianos, and they stop at nothing in their efforts to accomplish this end. Should a customer in their store mention the Bruenn piano they are told by one and all: "What ever piano you buy, don't buy a Bruenn, for they wont last." The customer being told the same story in every store naturally thinks where there is so much smoke there must be some fire, fights shy of the Bruenn piano, "because it's made in Oakland and won't last" pays two prices for Eastern slop-made goods and congratulates himself on his narrow escape. As a matter of fact, owing to its extra strong construction, the Bruenn piano will outlast any Eastern piano, it being particularly constructed to withstand the effects of our climate, all the material being seasoned here, while Eastern pianos being made under entirely different climatic conditions, often undergo a second seasoning in the house of the purchaser to the utter ruin of the instrument.

In the extremely hot and dry regions of Redding, Sacramento, Fresno and Southern California where the best of Eastern pianos have failed, the Bruenn piano has stood like a rock. Should you desire to buy a piano, I will place a Bruenn piano on trial in your house side by side in the same room against any first-class Eastern upright piano for beauty of finish, tone touch, quality of action and general workmanship, and will pay all expenses connected with the transportation of both instruments, so that this proposition cannot be evaded on the score of expense. Wherever this has been done the Bruenn piano has been almost invariably victorious. Of late, however, a purchaser soliciting a first-class Eastern piano on trial against a Bruenn, has been told that WE would not disgrace our piano by putting it on trial against a Bruenn piano."

Whether you want to buy a piano or not, call at Bruenn's piano store, Southwest corner of Broadway and Twelfth street, and hear and see what Oakland produces in the piano line. Respectfully,

A BRUENN,
Manufacturer of the Bruenn piano.

SIXTEENTH YEAR.

The Prosperous College at Livermore.

THE CEREMONIES OF GRADUATION.

Medals Awarded for Proficiency and Deportment During the Term Just Ended.

The evening train for Livermore yesterday carried a great many more passengers than usual from San Francisco and Oakland, for the commencement exercises of the Livermore College were to be held last evening, and there are many students at Professor Smith's institution from this part of the county, and of course their parents were there to see how the young ladies and gentlemen acquitted themselves. The college has just passed its sixteenth anniversary under the most favorable circumstances, and as an institution of learning it is recognized as one of the most thorough on the coast.

There were four graduates this year—all of them young ladies—and the exercises last evening were unusually entertaining. There was an abundance of good music, some very meritous vocal selections, and four well-composed essays by the young ladies whose school life has just ended.

Farmers' Union Hall, where the exercises were held, was none too large to accommodate the audience that had been invited, and the hall was neatly decorated by profusions of cut flowers and tastefully arranged greenery.

All the musical selections were worthy of the favorable comment they received, and the musicians showed by their masterly playing that careful instruction has been well bestowed upon industrious and gifted students.

Many of the scholars were encored, and nearly all of them received beautiful flowers from their admiring friends.

A double piano duet, a grand valse de concert, by Holst, was the first selection on the programme, and it was played by Misses Delia Hewitt, Mabel Harlan, Dottie Colby and Anna Werner.

Then followed an essay on "Aspirations," by Miss Lena Fuller.

She quoted the well-known ballad beginning "There was an old woman tossed up in a basket," and said that while this old woman's aspiration lacked many of those substantial elements which appeal so forcibly to the people of this material age, it is worthy of our attention because of its lofty aim. Our mutual philosophy tells us that a man who chooses anything but the highest is not a moral one. All will agree that the higher a man goes in his profession the more he is looked up to as great. That a high ideal is as necessary to the attainment of eminence as great industry and patience is clearly seen if we turn our mental telescopes upon some of the bright stars that illumine the sky of music, literature or art.

In proof of her assertion the essayist dwelt particularly on the lives of Mendelssohn, Raphael, Lincoln, Horace Greely and others. "These great sky-reaching aspirations are the kind that all should have, not being content to look always on the ground, expecting there to pick up what even we wish without the least labor. Not all aspirations are of this broad kind, but some though they are sky-reaching, are built on the narrow foundation of selfishness and therefore sure to fall." As an example she quoted the life of P. P. Hutchinson, famous as a speculator on the Chicago grain exchange, and his sudden downfall and loss of his reason. "This example does but enforce our statement of a high ideal if permanent honors are to be achieved," concluded the essay, "we who are just entering upon the realities of life need not be discouraged. There are yet many lofty heights to be mounted, many regions of the sky to be swept clear of the cobwebs that hide the bright blue from the eyes of men. If our purpose is high and our courage fail not, we too may rise through patient labor until we have written our names upon the skies to shine as guiding stars for those who are to follow."

Misses Addie and Jessie Fonner, two young ladies with fine voices, then sang a duet, "Hope Beyond," which received a hearty encore, and Emil Blanckenburg, a 13-year-old student, distinguished himself by playing a piano solo, Mozart's "Fantasie," a very difficult composition for so young a scholar.

Charles Hadsell gave a violin solo, "Blue Bells of Scotland," which was encored, but the young man only bowed his acknowledgement of the honor.

Then Miss Bessie V. Newell read an interesting essay on "Chivalry," which she said existed in the Eleventh Century, filling the place that is now occupied by all educational and social societies. It was among the Teutons that these traits originated and then the essayist told how the youth of the period fulfilled the requirements of Knighthood. "Chivalry made many brave, noble and courteous men, such as we find in Richard, the Lionheart of England, or Sir Philip Sidney. These are of the past, but there are as brave men today as there were then—those who are kind and loving to mothers, who respect their fathers and who have deep regard for the feelings of others. Without detracting from the valor of the crusaders of olden times, the chivalry of today shows itself in courteous regard for the helpless and the innocent."

The brave are the tenderest,
The loving are the daring.

Then came a piano duet, one of Heller's compositions, played by Misses Mabel Reed and Jessie Henderson, and though neither of the little ones is yet 12 years of age, their playing equaled that of the older scholars. Their playe before that audience as if it were an every-day occurrence to face such a sea of people, and their selection was given with all the grace and ease of thorough musicians. They were enthusiastically applauded and bowed their thanks like prima donnas.

A vocal solo, "Alla Stella Confidante," by Robandi, with violin obligato by Professor Kayton, was next given by Miss Addie Fonner and was the occasion of another encore, and Miss Addie Rohrer followed with a piano solo, "In Beaute ous May," by Lichner.

The next number on the programme was one of the best. It was a double duet arranged for four violins, the players being Charles Hadsell, Chauncey Foote, Miss Annie Hadsell and Duncan Smith. The students handled their bows well, particularly Miss Hadsell and Master Foote, the latter of whom has had scarce six weeks' training under Professor Kayton.

"Music" was the topic treated by Miss Annie Mabel Fuller in her essay, and she said that comparing music with the other fine arts, which are acknowledged to be the noblest, it leads them all. Simple sounds are unfit for musical expression because they are not brilliant enough. The sounds of the flute are somewhat like those of closed organ pipes, but when associated with other instruments which bring out the harmony the flute, because of the perfect softness of its tones and the way in which it renders rapid movements, is charming and cannot be replaced by any other instrument. From the earliest times music has been considered as the language of the heart. But unlike spoken language it can be understood by the people of every nation. What appeals more to human nature than music? What will better express our feelings of joy and sorrow and hope? As a language, music tells us more than words. It always says more than our intellects can grasp. The great moral sentiment of the human heart is love, but music which touches the heart is love in its purest essence, and he who understands the tone language in its true meaning, drinks in deeper sorrows and greater joys than words can convey."

Then Duncan L. Smith sang "The King's Champion" and was encored. He has a powerful bass voice, which has been well developed by careful training.

A piano solo, Schubert's "Impromptu," was played by Miss Addie Fonner in a very graceful manner, and then came a vocal trio, "Summer Fancies," by Misses Addie and Jessie Fonner and Duncan Smith.

Miss Sarah Emily Tingman went into politics for her essay, and she demonstrated that it is not difficult for all women to grasp the idea of the tariff question, and she delivered an admirable campaign speech for the Democratic party. "The Inconsistencies of the Republican Party" was the subject of her essay, and she handled it well. She said that from its infancy the Republican party had been crying "Tariff for Protection"—tariff for the masses. The Democratic party, which has existed almost from the birth of the nation, has upheld the principle of the majority of political economists who have maintained the principle of "Tariff for Revenue Only." Those things which are indispensible for our comfort and existence, such as the furniture of our homes, our clothes and bread, are the very ones which the Republicans have most heavily taxed. Now that a Congress composed mainly of Republicans has come into session it has permitted the President of the United States to make and put into effect many reciprocity treaties, which is but free trade and a virtual acknowledgement of the correctness of the stand taken by the Democrats. The Democratic party never even imagined free-trade principles on such a broad basis as this. Then the essayist discussed free trade and protection like John P. Irish, and pointed out that the Republicans by high tariff and unrestricted immigration has deluged the manufactories and flooded the land with the very workmen whose goods they are trying to keep out by a high protective tariff.

Miss Annie Mabel Fuller then played Moszkowski's "Valse Brilliante," and received hearty applause, and Duncan L. Smith played an admirable violin solo.

Hollander's "Theme and Variations," for two pianos, was the last number on the programme, and was charmingly played by Miss Annie Mabel Fuller and Miss Anna Werner.

Then Professor Smith announced the result of the final examinations. The graduating class was examined in twenty studies. The four graduates, Miss Sarah Emily Tingman, Miss Lena Fuller, Miss Bessie V. Newell and Miss Annie Mabel Fuller, had taken all the work. In all twenty studies Misses Fuller and Tingman had made remarkably good records and the result was astonishing for its closeness, Miss Fuller getting 1743 credits and Miss Tingman 1745, a difference of only two credits, with an equal percentage of 87. Owing to this fact both young ladies were presented with gold medals.

In the junior class Lottie Cozell stood highest, with 88 per cent; Delia Hewitt second, with 87 per cent, and Duncan Smith and Thornton Watson fourth, with 81 per cent.

In the preparatory class are twenty-one scholars, Miss Addie Rhorer standing highest with 90½ per cent.

Miss Cozell and Miss Rhorer were called forward and each was presented with a handsome medal. The medal for deportment and application to studies during the year was awarded to Miss Gracie Fay.

The principal then thanked the audience for the attendance and indulged in a little mild criticism. He criticised parents for trying to crowd their children through the school too fast, for not visiting the institution during the term, as well as at the end of the year, and young men for wanting to get out into the world too early to the neglect of their education.

Rev. W. F. B. Lynch, President of the County Board of Education, made a tender address to the graduates, which contained much kindly advice, and the entertainment ended with the presentation of diplomas.

The Livermore College is one of the most thorough institutions on the coast, and its instructors rank among the highest. Professor T. A. Spaulding, Instructor of Mathematics, is a graduate of the institution. Professor Aitken and Professor Doval are in high standing in their branches. Miss Anna Werner, formerly of Cincinnati but now of San Francisco, needs no praise other than the record her piano students made last night, and Professor Kayton, Instructor of the Violin, recently from New York, has demonstrated his ability by the remarkable playing of his students.

Among the former graduates of the college are Professor E. T. Hanns, principal of the Peralta School; W. W. Merdenhall, D. J. Stewart, Miss Jennie Doyle and Stonewall J. Harris, County Surveyor of Mariposa County.

AGAINST THE SPECIAL TAX.

The Board of Trade Prompt to Take Action in Opposition.

A Special Committee Appointed—The New Officers of the Board Elected by the Directors.

The reorganized Board of Trade has promptly taken action to resist the proposition of the Council to impose a special tax on merchants of this city by passing an ordinance requiring a license from storekeepers. A committee was appointed last evening, constituted of James Cahill, S. B. Boyce, J. C. Hussey, C. Nordhausen and W. A. Rouse, to represent the board.

Mr. Cahill said to a TRIBUNE reporter this morning: "The Committee will appear before the Council at the next meeting, as the representatives of the entire mercantile community of Oakland, to oppose the levy of an unjust and special tax on the merchants of this city. Every merchant in Oakland, so far as I have heard, opposes the proposition to impose this tax."

The directors of the board last evening evening elected M. J. Keller, president; W. A. Kennedy, vice president and J. F. Street, secretary and treasurer. The directors declared themselves earnestly and urgently opposed to any special tax on the merchants.

THE COUNTRY SCHOOL

It is No Longer the Shed Once it Used to Be.

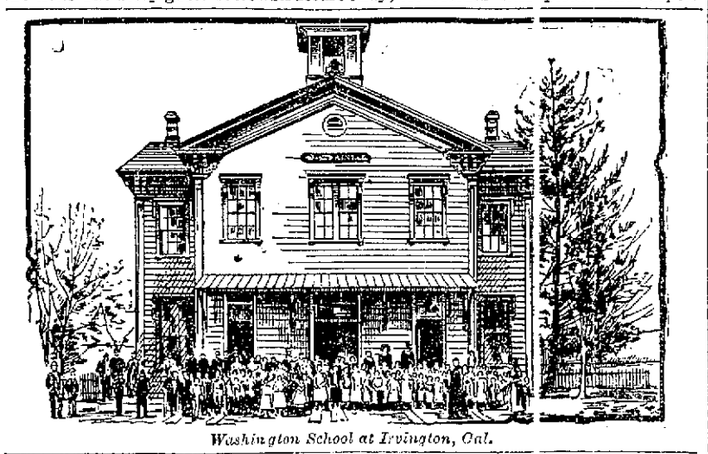

FINE BUILDINGS IN ALAMEDA COUNTY

The Structures in the Rural Towns That Are Deservedly the Pride of the People.

If Alameda county may boast on account of her surpassing excellence in any one particular, it is when she reflects upon the size, appearance, number, and standard of scholarship of her public schools.

It is a fact not generally known that the public schools of California rank very high in the United States, and it has been said by competent authorities that the schools of Alameda easily lead those of this favored State.

Take for instance, the country districts. The average father of a family in California, can recall, if he has received a part of his education in a rural district school in the East, a more or less vivid picture of what that school was like. He can well remember the little one-story gable-roofed structure with the three or four blank, staring windows at either side, its single door in front, flanked by two more staring windows, always presenting to the childish mind the eyes of a grotesque face of which the door was the nose, and the worn steps leading thereto, the mouth. This picturesque structure usually stood at "the cross-roads," in the dust of which the children played at "recess" or "nooning," and the thrifty "boarded men" would have gasped in horror at such an extravagant proposal as one for a playground for the children would have been considered. Within the walls of this temple of learning the Californian will remember was a familiar scene. The rows of desks, graduating from the low ones in front, adapted to the short legs of the primer class pupils, to the more dignified "back seats," where the "big boys" and the "grown girls" reigned supreme and studied, flirted and did their sums as best suited themselves, well knowing that the solitary teacher's eyes could not be everywhere. There was the slender line from desk to door,

Washington School at Irvington, Cal.

First meridian of the school,
Which all the scholars toe by rule.

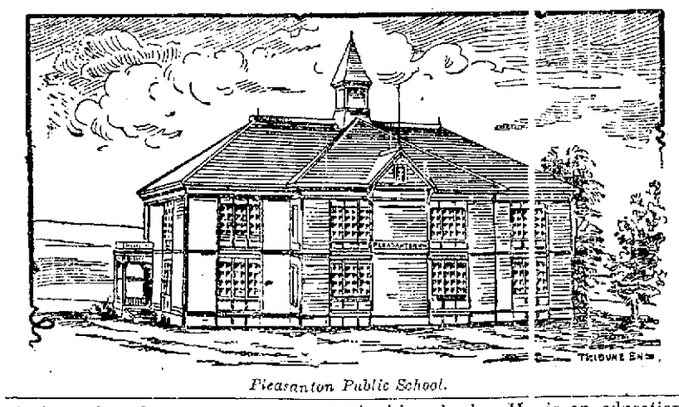

When the big spelling class is in session the big rusty stove, the long "side seats," the dilapidated blackboards, the uncertain clock and the various other furnishings of the well remembered "deestrick skule," presided over by a single instructor, usually a young girl for the summer term, and a man in the winter, when the boys, released from farm duty, flocked to the temple of learning. The teacher as a rule "boarded around," an arrangement which kept him under the constant tuition of that hard master, experience. The picture is not in the least overdrawn. There is such a school to be found today at nearly every "four corners" east of the Rocky mountains.

But the California schools! To speak more particularly still, our Alameda county schools present a far different picture. Our fruit, our flowers, our climate, are all perfect after their kind, and our school buildings in no wise fall below the high standard of the banner county. It is doubtful if any other section of the State can show so many handsome, roomy structures, well kept, and surrounded by ample, often pretty play grounds, as can Alameda county, indeed, in the large area comprised within its boundaries, there is scarcely a shabby structure. They are all well built, provided with books, maps, adjustable blackboards, and all the various apparatus of the most improved educational methods, equal to the best schools in the cities. The instructors, and nearly every school can boast of several, are thoroughly educated and especially trained men and women, who recognize their calling as one of a high order, and exalt it as it exalts them.

It is another fact not generally known that teachers coming from other States, when attempting to qualify as teachers here usually fail to pass examination in the same grades as they held Eastern certificates for, because the standard of examination in this State is higher and requires more thorough education on the part of the teacher.

It was in the public schools of Alameda county that that movement originated that has caused the Stars and Stripes to float from the roof of nearly every schoolhouse in the State. To the former County Superintendent of Education, P. M. Fisher, is due the credit of this patriotic impulse.

THE TRIBUNE gives pictures of a few of the representative schools in the county districts of the county. There are many more just as handsome, and just as worthy of being represented here, but since it is impossible to show them all, these may be taken as fair samples of county school architecture. The commencement season is now at hand, and the people will then hear directly, and, it is safe to say, creditably, from every school in the county.

Pleasanton Public School.

ters have one at San Jose and there are several private picnics.

This evening the banquet of Whidden Hose Company will take place, and an enjoyable time is promised to the invited guests. The members of the company are excellent hosts.

A fox, belonging to the menagerie of the Neptune Gardens, escaped last week and has been playing havoc with the West End chicken roosts. Yesterday it was discovered by some Chinese gardeners in their corn patch and they chased the animal and killed it with their hoes.

The new house of the Encinal Boat Club at the foot of Grand street was formally dedicated last evening. There was a large gathering at the house, which is elegantly fitted up, and a pleasant evening was passed in music, dancing and refreshments. The Encinal Boat Club is the swell organization of Alameda.

A BAR IN THE MOTOR.

A Stop of the Cars of the Electric Motor Road Last Night.

The passengers on the electric road to Berkeley were delayed at Grove and Twenty-fourth streets last evening for about an hour and a half. The motorneer of car No. 2 of the Shattuck avenue line raised the trap over the motor of the forward trucks as the car was on its way to Berkeley about 10 P. M., and a small iron bar rolled down among the machinery. Before the car could be stopped one of the pinion wheels was badly damaged and the truck had to be taken from under the car and the pinion taken out before it could be taken to the motor house. The car was finally attached to another car and taken to the shop about midnight. The damage was easily removed today.

FATHER McNALLY'S SCHOOLS.

Grand Exhibitions Next Tuesday Evening and Wednesday Afternoon.

Hansen's Hall at West Oakland will be a lively place on next Tuesday evening. The boys of Father McNally's schools will give a closing exhibition which will be a very pleasing thing. This year it is arranged with special care, and no expense will be spared to make the boys' entertainment a demonstration of talent agreeable to teachers, parents and people.

The Reverend Father takes great pride in his schools. He is an educationist from the Baby's Kindergarten to the Science Heights. He takes special pleasure in announcing a most beautiful exhibition in Elite Hall at 2:30 o'clock on next Wednesday afternoon. The girls' school will bloom out in its most fascinating colors, radiating in music, song, comedy, drama, etc. These girls' schools are in charge of the Sisters of St. Joseph, West Oakland. There will be a regular hegira of parents and friends from West Oakland to Elite Hall. The closing exercises of this school is always a gorgeous affair, and very attractive as well on account of the high order of the trained talent, as on account of the popular fame of these sisters as teachers of the youth. Undoubtedly among the many closing exercises of the schools this will be a grand treat.

VALUE OF A TRAINED NURSE.

Frank E. Goodban's Agency for Nurses on Pine Street, San Francisco.

It is a recognized fact, which every fair-minded physician will freely admit, that the recovery of a sick person is materially aided by skillful and judicious nursing. The skilled trained nurse, who watches every symptom and change in the patient, reporting the same to the doctor on his arrival, and unfailingly and intelligently ministers to his or her every want, guided by a knowledge born of experience and training, often saves the life that the doctor by himself but expects to prolong. There has been in San Francisco for the last two years an agency for nurses, which, under the director of its founder, promoter and proprietor, Frank E. Goodban, is proving to be one of the most useful and valuable institutions in the State, having from sixty to seventy of its members always engaged throughout the year, with a constantly increasing demand. Mr. Goodban has over one hundred trained nurses, male and female, who make headquarters at his agency, 615 Pine street, San Francisco, each one having had a written recommendation of three physicians under whom he or she nursed before being placed on his list. Mr. Goodban himself is an experienced nurse, dresser and masseur, whose credentials are first-class and indorsed by the leading allopathic, homeopathic and electic physicians in San Francisco. L. D. telephone 78. Branch offices, 425 Sutter, 340 Geary, 219 Twenty-first, 1113 Market streets, San Francisco, Cal.

TERMS FOR REGULAR NURSES—Female (for female patients), $20 to $25, (for male patients) $25 to $30 per week; Male, $5 to $6 per day or night (of twelve hours), $8 to $10 for both. Dressers, $2 to $5 per visit. Masseurs, general treatment, $2 to $3; local treatment, three for $5.

TERMS FOR ASSISTANT (SOCIETY) NURSES—Female, $16 to $20 per week; Male, $3 to $4 per day or night, $5 to $6 for both. No fee charged for furnishing them.

Leeching, Cupping, Catheterizing and dressing of any kind performed (instruments provided); Anæsthetics administered; Operations and Autopsies attended; Baths (medicated or otherwise) given; also Faradic Electricity or Massage Treatment at private residences or at the agency, subject to physician's instructions.

It is no society or combination of nurses. It was formed and is managed by the proprietor and his wife alone, to whom all communications or complaints should be addressed at the main office, 615 Pine St., San Francisco.

THE ELECTRIC ROAD.

Splendid Improvements at Several Points Along the Line.

The attention of our readers is called to the offer of lots in the Arden Tract at private sale which appears in this issue. This tract is centrally located between Oakland and Berkeley and the Contra Costa range and the bay. The electric railroad passes through it. It would be surprising to many of our readers, who have not done so, to take the electric cars and go to Berkeley and observe the rapid march of improvements along its line. We congratulate the people living along its line on the improved method they now enjoy of rapid transit between the country lying between the University and Oakland.

PUBLIC SAFETY DEMANDS

That only honest and reliable medicines should be placed upon the market. It cannot, therefore, be stated too emphatically, nor repeated too often, that all who are in need of a genuine Blood-purifier should be sure and ask for

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Sarsaparilla. Your life, or that of some one near and dear to you, may depend on the use of this well-approved remedy in preference to any other preparation of similar name. It is compounded of Honduras sarsaparilla (the variety most rich in curative properties), stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, and the iodides. The process of manufacture is original, skilful, scrupulously clean, and such as to secure the very best medicinal qualities of each ingredient. This medicine is not boiled nor heated, and is, therefore, not a decoction; but it is a compound extract, obtained by a method exclusively our own, of the best and most powerful alteratives, tonics, and diuretics known to pharmacy. For the last forty years, Ayer's

Sarsaparilla

has been the standard blood-purifier of the world—no other approaching it in popular confidence or universal demand. Its formula is approved by the leading physicians and druggists. Being pure and highly concentrated, it is the most economical of any possible blood medicine. Every purchaser of Sarsaparilla should insist upon having this preparation and see that each bottle bears the well-known name of

HONOR WON.

Graduating Class of the High School.

FIFTY-EIGHT RECEIVE DIPLOMAS.

An Immense Throng of People Crowd the First Congregational Church.

Essays and Orations of Interest Receive the Attention of an Appreciative Audience.

The graduating exercises of the High school were held last evening in the First Congregational Church, which was filled to overflowing long before the hour for the exercises. There had been a great rush for tickets, and many were disappointed in not being able to attend the exercises. The decorations, according to a time-honored custom, were in the hands of the Senior Class, and were artistic in the extreme. The prevailing tones were pink and gray, the class colors of the Senior A.

May, '91, graduates one of the largest classes that ever left the High school. The pupils, fifty-one in number, were seated on the platform, and presented an appearance of which any city might be proud. More enthusiasm than is usual was displayed at the exercises, each member and the class generally being warmly received. Superintendent McClymonds and the Board of Education occupied seats near the platform, while the presence of many of the city officials was noticeable. The exercises began promptly at 7:30 o'clock, Principal McChesney introducing the graduates of the evening.

The music was under the direction of S. A. Chambers of the High School corps. The numbers by the Glee Club were very bright and pleasing and particularly well rendered; perhaps the best number was the "Bridal March" from Lohengrin. The double quartet by the seniors was well received, and added a charming variety to the musical part of the programme. Shirley Baker has a soft tenor voice, and his vocal solo was enthusiastically applauded. A selected piano solo was also given with much expression by Miss Hilda Newman.

After the opening march had been played by Miss Gertrude Allen, the following programme was carried out:

March ..... Edward Hosk
Gertrude Allen.

Essay, "Progress," .....
Louise Hawkins.

Essay, "The Highest Education of Women,"
Grace Wilson.

Essay, "Seventeen and Seventy,".....
Vida Redington.

Piano solo.....
Hilda Newman.

Essay, "Why I Go to School,".....
Charles Lathrop.

Essay, "Wonders of Nature,".....
May Applegarth.

Essay, "Gossip about the Word Family,"....
Carrie Reed.

Boat Song,..... Cowen
Senior Double Quartet.

Essay, "Manual Training,".....
Alice Young.

Poem, "Athena".....
Walter R. Graves.

Chorus, "Song of the Vikings"..... Fanning
High school Glee Club.

Essay, "Silence Is Golden".....
Katharine Lynch.

Class history .....
Bessie Penniman.

Vocal solo.....
Shirley Baker.

Discussion, "Did Alexander Hamilton or Thomas Jefferson Do More to Establish Our Government on a Permanent Basis?".....
Katharine Felton, William H. Gorrill.

Announcement of the graduates by the Superintendent, J. W. McClymonds.

Presentation of diplomas by H. T. Smith, President of the Board of Education.

Chorus, "Bridal March" from Lohengrin.....
(a.) Chorus from Bohemian Girl.....
(b.) "Peasant's Song" from Faust.....
High School Glee Club.

The announcements of graduates was made by Superintendent McClymonds, who made his remarks brief on account of the lateness of the hour.

H. T. Smith, president of the Board of Education, in a few very appropriate remarks, presented their diplomas to the following graduates of the class of May '91:

Gertrude A. Allen,	May S. Applegarth,
Shirley Baker,	Mary C. Benzley,
Gerret A. Bigelow,	Mary Borland,
Bertha T. Bradley,	Paul A. Brizard,

THE ESSAYS AND ORATIONS.

Miss Louise Hawkins' Essay.

An essay, entitled "Progress," was read by Miss Louise Hawkins, who said:

The continual striving after one's ideal of perfection and gradually round by round attaining to the top of the ladder, we call progress. Behold the modern miracles! Electricity and steam are harnessed and driven at our beck and call. "Edison's fingers outwit Aladdin's lamp." The news of events in New York reaches our ears at an earlier hour than that in which they occur. The accents of the Hawaiian King are preserved to his living subjects long after he has passed away. Steam has annihilated time; the crawling caravan gives way to the flying train. Japan turns from darkness to light; China, the hermit nation, peeps from its cell; from a puny infant grows our own great nation, and "Forefathers Rock" proves the foundation of the greatest and most progressive nation on the globe. The wigwam is supplanted by the busy mill, and the white sails of nations come and go where the seagull flitted alone. Alfred the Great was distinguished in his time by being able to read. Now the veriest little street arab may number among his accomplishments the ability to do that. In the early history of the colonies a man was forbidden by law to beat his wife with a rod thicker than his thumb. Rejoice, therefore, O my sisters, that you live in the world of today.

In the schoolhouse of today there are air, light, warmth, ventilation—every adjunct of comfort and culture. A library of intellectual lore, a laboratory which would fill with delight the ancient alchemist—the accumulated wisdom of ages is at the command of the student.

Judging by the splendid achievements of the past, as we lift the veil and look into the future, is it not richer in promise than any age that preceded it? Master minds are at work on the problems of the day, and who will say that the race may not be perfected and the regenerated world ruled by principles of love and justice, and in that dawn of better days we shall usher in an era of "Peace on Earth."

Miss Grace D. Wilson's Essay.

An essay entitled "The Higher Education of Woman; Does It Unfit Her for the Duties of Life?" was read by Miss Grace D. Wilson. An epitome follows: The age in which we live is echoing the prayer, "Let there be light!" Later generations may add "And there was light." What is meant by a higher education has been well expressed by one of the thinkers of our own time. "The higher education is that training which contemplates man as a being, and not as an instrument. Its object is of infinitely superior value upon man himself, on his own account, to fit him for his duties, intellect, heart, imagination, conscience." Not all women have the capacity to receive the higher education, but the same is true of men. Perhaps more men than women, when weighed in the balance are found wanting. It would seem so, to visit our insane asylums, and jails, and to witness the loafers hanging about our streets. Woman needs to be educated for her own protection and her own help, that she may be self-reliant and self-dependent; that she may have resources within herself if thrown back upon her own strength. She needs it to make her a helpful womanly woman, and not until she herself is helped can she do her duty to others. The home is a training school for the formation of character, where woman's best and noblest work is done. How great her need that her reason and judgment be liberally educated for the shaping of those little lives that she molds with the hands of the great mother love. Through the home, she does her duty to her State, her nation, but who dares say that her duty as a citizen must end there?

Man's prominent intellectual faculty is judging—while woman's is guiding. How necessary that her reading and judgment be trained that she may guide rightly. Give woman this higher education, so that if she is not able to "realize the ideal," she may idealize the real; that she may know the laws that govern her own being; and that she may secure the key to the temple of truth, which key is the power of active thought.

Miss Vida Redington's Essay.

An essay was read by Miss Vida Redington entitled "Seventeen and Seventy." The young lady read: "At seventeen all is harmonious as the beautiful season of spring, and like a budding tree our youth gives promise of the deeds to come, the harvest to be gathered. Now the trees are coming into bloom, while tinged with delicate pink are the blossoms of apple and quince, almost spotlessly white are the slender branches of the cherry and pear. All is awakening, and foretelling the coming of summer, but after summer must come autumn. Everything is to be done at seventeen. A choice of tasks is at hand. Shall seventeen take a high standing among men, shall he aid in the plans which will enlighten people or enter into plots not for the general good? Shall he explore the Dark Continent or discover unknown properties of electricity and put them to uses never before dreamed of.

The fall of life has been reached when 70 is at hand. Life has been spent, and in ways as various as the colors of the woods in October. All the work worth doing has been done at 70. That is not the time to retrieve a bad record, or even to add to a good one. Perhaps the richest man of 70 now living would change place with any healthy boy of 17, for this old man has seen how life should have been spent. To a schoolgirl of 17, 70 seems a time of sadness and disappointment—a time when the outlook must be upon the great mystery of another world. But perhaps the backward look upon a well-spent life is as bright as the forward look upon an untried one. Perhaps the enjoyment of Edward Everett Hale in meeting the most whom his teachings, his writing and example have helped, is much greater than that of the schoolboys who rejoice in the good wishes of the friends who bid them God speed on their departure from their Alma Mater. Nothing of earth can we love more reverently, nothing fills the soul with such veneration, as the temples crowned by locks which are silvered with gray, when that life is a record of good. Then do we feel,

"Beautiful forever, the grief-softened tread,
And the time touched glances—the dear gray head;
The prophetic paleness, the lines of care,
Memory's consecration makes men always fair.

Charles Lathrop's Essay.

"Why I Go to School," was the title of an essay read by Charles Lathrop. He said:

I have proved to myself four things, that soul is incomparably superior to body, that earth holds food for soul, but that should earth be taken away food for soul would still remain. Therefore I have come to the conclusion that soul food is incomparably superior to body food. But here comes the necessity of knowing what is proper soul food. As I think of it, I can conceive of no soul-food that is not viewing God. Looking at God through his works—not only through the Bible, for that to me is God's word somewhat tainted by the hands of men, but through his incomprehensible, and for that very reason, uplifting works—only the veriest glimpse of which the matter-shackled soul can grasp. I look at the earth, wrapped in a glory of beauty, and I see the very tiniest gleam of this glory flashes forth an ungraspable truth, that must be, and yet I see not how it can be. The color of every grass blade, the sound of every water drop, is as unsolvable a mystery to me, as are the unsolvable depths of infinite space, the drowning lengths of eternal time. The grapplings with this infinite in the works of God, I think are the true food for the soul. I may pass back somewhat the veil, yet never can I lay things wholly bare. But here the thought comes—why try to solve unsolvable things? But if I do not question, I merely feed the body and starve the soul. If Nature expresses God, I can see no way of soul culture other than asking unsolvable questions. For the body a high school course may be of little benefit, but by it I may see things proved true in the finite, and so I can apply these things in the infinite. The high school gives me the tools with which to work, and shows me glimpses of what an infinite field there is wherein to use these tools.

The glory of God shines softened thro' unnumbered veils. What more true work than ever parting, ever pressing to one side their mazes? What more truly to be striven after than a nearer companionship with God?

Miss May Applegarth's Essay.

"The Wonder of It" was the subject chosen by Miss May Applegarth for her essay.

It was natural said she that the supreme power should be given to harmony or love (as they are identical), for God himself is but the embodiment of this principle, and so surely as work bears the impress of the master that executed it, His universe must wear the beauty of His own divine nature. The colors that tint the evening skies, melt away on distant hills or glow in grass and flower, show God's hand, not man's. Far in the north stretch miles on miles of ice, here piled in huge masses, there lying in level plains, smooth as glass. All is dead. Life could not exist in that bitter atmosphere. But is beauty excluded? Ah, look at the wondrous forms that these ice mountains assume. See the turrets and domes, the gracious curves blending so perfectly, and that dazzling succession of colors as the sunlight plays upon the distant masses, or wait until the northern lights set the heavens aflame, and the glittering expanse becomes one magnificent mirror to flash back the rosy light—then realize that no corner of the earth is too barren for the presence of harmony's child, exquisite beauty.

The microscope and telescope each open an infinity to our gaze, and all the wonder that both reveal are obedient to the rule of harmony.

The mind shrinks from the immensity revealed through the telescope, and yet the whole universe is no more wonderful, than the crystal sphere of a single drop of water. It was as easy to create the one as the other, and the stars that for untold ages have looked down upon us hide no greater mystery than the dew drop that sparkles for a brief hour in the morning sun.

And now man is a part of this creation, subject also to this law, and if he would read no more fully "the wonder of it" he has but to turn his eyes from external nature, but to look within to see how truly all that is noblest and best in himself does obey, and to realize that this is indeed the "Spirit of Life"; that this breathed into inanimate matter is ever struggling upward, like the music from a chime of bells, and raising with it the creation it inspires.

Miss Carrie Reed's Essay.

"Gossip About the Word Family" was the subject of an essay by Miss Carrie Reed. Following is a synopsis: We may surely conclude that the "Words" are as old a race as ourselves, for the family must have had its origin in the time of Adam and Eve, since the Bible gives us no foundation for supposing that the life of that venerable pair was a perpetual pantomime. Tradition says that until the building of the Tower of Babel Grandpapa and Grandmamma Word pursued the even tenor of their way, and all the little words walked the straight and narrow path of virtue. But one day all the Words, great and small, participated in a family jar, and they were scattered to the four corners of the earth.

The English is the sturdiest and best limb of the genealogical tree, and very proud the English words are of their rank, and like most persons of high estate, their life is made burdensome by the poor relations who follow in their wake. Nothing gives so much offense to a well-bred Word as a disregard for his orthography. Just as some women enhance their beauty by fine clothing and ornaments, so some Words endeavor to improve their appearance by affected spelling.

Still the Words, in spite of their pride and affectation, are entirely at man's mercy. However, like slaves, they love their master if he have sympathy with them and an appreciation of their value, and, obeying his slightest call, express for him the most fanciful and intangible of his thoughts. Thus the Words lovingly served Milton. Among the bits of gossip in the Word family of late has been mentioned the fact that that runaway couple, "Gee Whizz," have obtained a divorce, Gee re-enlisting in the Alphabet and Miss Whizz going back to her relations, the Onomatopoems. Miss Program has also adopted the dress reform and now appears in phonetic costume, without the final me. I asked of a friend why the Words appeared so languid and dull about this time. "It's the very worst time in the whole year for us," said he. "We are expected to be at the beck and call of every High school scholar, and when you think of the way they turn us and twist us and put us out, it is no wonder that we are thin and exhausted.

Still I have come to the conclusion that for a family who have the reputation of being dry and bookish the Words are a very sociable set of people.

Miss Alice Young on "Manual Training."

Miss Alice Young chose for the subject of her essay, "Manual Training," saying among other things: "The hand is one of the principal agents of the mind. What the brain wills the hand executes. The Creator has connected the mind and the hand, and an attempt to combine thinking and doing has brought the subject of manual training before the educational world. Russia was the first to introduce the new system, and now France has made it compulsory in her public schools. Manual-training schools bear the same relation to the mechanical arts as the present schools bear to the professions, in each case the boy has learned an alphabet. Statistics show that 95 per cent of American school children leave school at or before the completion of the grammar course in order to learn a trade. These children may be divided into two classes—the first class, on account of poverty, cannot take time to complete the course, and so learn a trade. The second class are either dull or have no taste for study.

"Would not manual instruction in the schools do something for these classes? The dull children are not at all dull when they have found the pursuit for which they have a liking and interest. In Oakland, with the exception of two schools, drawing and writing form the only hand training. Manual training is not proposed as a substitute for the existing school system, but as a supplement to it. The purpose of its desired introduction into the schools is to develop symmetrically, to train all instead of fostering an abnormal growth of certain faculties, in short, to provide an education which will be entire because it will comprise all the parts."

Walter R. Graves' Poem.

Walter R. Graves read a commendable poem, the subject was Athena and began thus:

Over fair Athens, couched upon her hills,
In silent splendor rose the maiden moon;
Darting her spangled rays o'er land and sea,
She shone upon the face of one who slept.
Midst half-hewn blocks of marble clear and pure,
From which the master's hand would soon evoke
The hidden spirits waiting to be freed,
Lay Phidias.

The poet then continues the story, telling how Phidias as the sculptor, whose work "no skill could match," falls into a deep slumber in which he sees a vision of the Goddess Athena. The vision fades into a mist and Phidias sleeps until dawn, when he arises and views his unfinished models with scorn. Then he takes his chisel to carve an image of the divine Athena, and labors unceasingly for months until his master-piece is finished. He views his work with a critical eye and disappointment clouds his brow. The face of his image does not suit him and in his despair he cries, "All my toil is lost."

The soft voice of the goddess interrupts his expressions of disappointment, telling him: "Not lost, Oh Phidias may but used so well, that ever shall thy name be known of men. Grieve not because my face thou didst not show. For that no man shall ever see till death hath loosed him from this earth to life sublime."

The following last verses in the poet's language indicate his skill in expressing his thoughts in verse:

Through Athens spread the rumors of his work,
And like the hungry bees to feast of sweets,
Men came to see. Then to the sculptor's door
Came Pericles, the mighty. When he saw
The lovely goddess, towering o'er his head,
Quick ceased the jests, and silent long he gazed.
"Phidias, the master hand of Greece is thine;
Build now on Athens' high Acropolis
A glorious temple in whose sacred walls
May dwell Athena, mistress over all."
So rose the Parthenon, the mighty fane
Of the great city which ruled half the earth.
Of marble built, it towered over all
On the high summit of the Acropolis.
There to the victor in the sacred games
Was given the prize, as from Athena's hand.
There countless wealth was stored to gain her care,
And no man dared molest it, fearing her.
Over fair Athens, couched upon her hills,
In silent splendor rises the pale moon.
Darting her spangled rays o'er land and sea,
She shines upon the spot where once was seen
The glorious Parthenon. But now, alas,
The ignorant vandal and the savage Turk
All have destroyed; and scattered o'er the ground
Are found but fragments of majestic forms
That once their proud heads reared to the great sun.
Think you because War's ruthless hand has spoiled
The triumph of the master's art, that now
Knowledge is dead? Not so. She knows no death.
Her sculptured semblance to decay may fall,
Yet lives Athena to aid works of men:
And ever to her shrine shall men press on,
For knowledge is alone of things on earth
The one great end for which lives all mankind.

Miss Katherine Lynch's Essay.

The subject of Miss Katherine Lynch's essay was "Silence is Golden." The following is an abstract: When we consider that the power of speech is one of the divine gifts we are forced to question the truth of this assertion. If we compare speech to silver, we must compare silence to some baser metal, or more fitly, if silence is golden, we must compare speech to nothing less than a combination of all precious gems. The setting of judicious silence only serves to enhance and accentuate the worth and beauty of speech. Was it not as heard in the speeches of a Carlyle or a Thackeray, sparkling and cutting, be likened to the diamond, which cuts while it dazzles? Is it not as heard from the lips of Gloucester like the opal, brilliant, fascinating and fatal? And from the lips of wisdom, tempered with mildness, does it not drop indeed like the "pearl of great price?" Our lives are brightened hourly by the free interchange of thoughts and experiences which lifts us from the groove of self, and by letting us into the lives of others, widens our range of thought, broadens our sympathies, and teaches us the beauty of living for others. Of what value would thoughts be if we did not express them? A great mind capable of detecting noble truths is not given by God for the use of one man alone. No reform has ever been accomplished save primarily through the words of some great man. Without the eloquence of Luther, where would have been the Reformation? Nay more, were in not that Christ and his disciples spread throughout the land the word of the true God, the world would still be laboring in spiritual darkness. We have but to look back over the history of the world to see how at every crisis in the life of a nation its destiny has been swayed by the power of speech. Thoughts we all have, but of what avail is the thought unless it is expressed?

So when we compare the value of silence with that of speech, let us no longer say that "silence is golden," unless we add: "And as gold in the world of today can open to the beggar the portal of Aladdin's palace, so speech in the world of all time can open to mortals the portal of the palace of progress, wisdom and truth."

The Class History.

The class history by Miss Bessie Penniman, was delivered by Miss Bessie Penniman, who recited it in a quaint but very effective way. Referring to the Junior A term, she said: One evening the tolling of the fire bell and the enthusiastic tooting of the horn announced that our school was in flames. Imagine our excitement as the wit, wisdom and learning confined for so many years in that educational storehouse were scattered before our eyes to the four winds of heaven. Geometrical problems exploded with a bang, and the nebular hypothesis, etherial to the last, went off in a sky rocket; while Artemides' principles were deprived of their foundations, and the binominal theorem expanded itself until it burst. As each glowing timber fell to the ground the ghost of Cæsar, a trifle mixed as to whether he was in Shakespeare's play or only at his own cremation ceremonies, now chanted, "Gallia est omnis divisa in partes tres," now shrieked the immortal phrase, "Et tu Brute!" Cicero's spirit hovered over the ruins of Mr. Burrill's room, wringing its ghostly hands and intoning, "O tempora! O mores!" Close at hand Virgil's wraith once more sang the fall of Troy. When the last ember had died out, leaving the old High School a thing of the past, our hearts were heavy and sad. Tearfully we gathered up the fragments of our dropsical school books and wended our weary way to the Synagogue.

After many months we came back to the luxuries of blackboards and rhetoricals, but once again on the evening breeze there floated the deep tones of the fire bell, and a second time we wended our melancholy way to the Synagogue.

In the closing she said: "So the term passed—the awful ordeal of examination was endured and here tonight we stand saying good-by to teachers, classes and each other. It has been a very happy three years that we have been preparing for this event, and now it is hard to say which feeling is stronger, delight at having attained the end for which we have been striving, or sorrow at separating, never again probably to be all together. We can only say that from our hearts we thank the teachers for their patience with our faults and for their sympathy with our efforts. And now dear old High School, May, '91, bids thee a fond adieu. Much hast thou suffered, long hast thou endured, that we might gain a firm foundation for future years of prosperity and usefulness."

The Debate Between Miss Felton and W. H. Gorrill.

One of the most meritorious numbers on the programme was the debate given by Miss Katherine B. Felton and Will H. Gorrill on the following subject: "Resolved, That Hamilton did more to establish our Government on a permanent foundation than Jefferson."

The following were the salient points made by Miss Felton for the affirmative: Let us compare the two men—Hamilton, the advocate of stability; Jefferson of progression; Hamilton, the conservative; Jefferson, the radical both advocates of liberty, both differing as to the means of attaining it, the former maintaining "that it was found neither in despotism nor in the extreme of democracy, but in moderate government;" the latter holding that "the weaker the government the greater was the liberty of the individual." Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence, carried laws securing religious freedom; but the spirit of the age demanded them, they must have come. Hamilton realized that rapid drift toward anarchy could only be checked by a strong, central government. He proposed a convention to assemble in Philadelphia, every element in the Constitution of order, of force, of duration, was contributed by him. Washington made Jefferson Secretary of State, Hamilton Secretary of the Treasury. The effect of Hamilton's policy was marvelous. Hamilton smote the rock of the national resources, and abundant streams of revenue gushed forth. He touched the dead corpse of the public credit, and it sprung upon its feet. His policy was fiercely opposed by Jefferson, who declared it was unconstitutional for Congress to charter a bank. Hamilton maintained that our government was sovereign within its own sphere. Without this flexibility our government could never have restrained a progressive people. The impracticability of strict construction was proved by Jefferson's own administration. I have left until the last the question of the Kentucky resolutions, based upon the principle of nullification and secession to which may be traced the southern doctrines of State sovereignty. In after years Jefferson not only acknowledged the authorship of the resolutions, but laid them down as the principles of the Democratic party. If, according to these resolutions, each State is to judge of the constitutionality of a law of Congress there will be forty supreme laws of the land.

In almost the very words of Jefferson did Calhoun declare the right of South Carolina to nullify the tariff law. Claiming Jefferson as patron, did the Southern States secede.

Today we look to the Federalist of Hamilton for the exposition of our Constitution. Today we look to the Kentucky Resolutions of Jefferson for the exposition of a doctrine which threatened the very existence of our Government, and was proved false by the issue of the Civil War.

Will H. Gorill defended the negative side of the question. Among other points made were the following: Primogeniture, entail and the union of church and State were destroyed by Jefferson in Virginia. His diplomatic service while President of the United States was a most splendid contribution to the permanency of our Government. The purchase of Louisiana was a stupendous stroke of statecraft, compared to which Hamilton's treasury measures pale and faint in insignificance. It secured our independence by giving room for such a population as Europe will never dare to attack, and by securing to the North the gold of California in the civil war. Jefferson's services in the cause of education cannot be forgotten. While the rise of nationality may be credited to Hamilton, at his door, also, must be laid the blame for the present ruling aristocracy of wealth which threatens the permanency of our institutions, an aristocracy created by class legislation, which protects the rich under the pretense of aiding the poor. Fix upon Jefferson if you will the responsibility of the civil war; to him also must you give credit for its favorable issue. To him give thanks that you are citizens and not subjects. Credit him with your religious freedom, your universal suffrage and your individual rights. Hamilton borrowed his principles from three thousand years of human misery, but Jefferson's theories will prove the salvation of our country.

ST. MARY'S PARISH SCHOOL.

The Boys of Father King's Church Taught by the Christian Brothers.

A Bright Entertainment at Elite Hall in the Presence of an Interested Throng.

The devoted Christian Brothers in charge of the parochial school connected with Father King's church arranged a very pleasing entertainment for the interest of the parents and friends of the children under their charge. The pupils of this school receive the customary general school education and are also instructed in Christian doctrine and the graces of life. Singing is taught by Professor J. Schorcht. The orchestra at the entertainment last evening in Elite Hall was under the direction of Professor J. Manning. The boys sang with vigor and recited with spirit, and the audience that filled the hall merrily applauded the youngsters.

First the orchestra played an overture. Then the choir sang an appropriate greeting chorus, "Welcome Tonight."

Paul K. Buckley welcomed the throng to the entertainment in a happy address, and then the following programme was carried out:

Young folks' welcome.....
John P. Flannery, Thomas P. Sweeney

Vocal solo, "Mr. Dooley's Geese".....
C. J. Morrison, W. R. Conners

ROUND OF THE THEATERS.

George Thatcher's Minstrels for Two Evenings Next Week.

"Men and Women" Continues Its Steady Popularity at the Baldwin—The Prospect of the New Theater in Oakland.

The speculations, arguments, predictions, expectations and indications of, for and about a new theater for Oakland have so many times been repeated and again repeated that the subject is usually the purpose for a jest and people lightly consider any statement on the topic. But now this city is nearer the accomplishment of the desire than ever before. Mr. McDonough's project to construct a proper play house at the corner of Fourteenth street and Broadway, the best corner in the city for such a purpose, is very close to a certainty. In the meantime Mr. Mothersole is doing his best with the Oakland Theater, and though the house is not a satisfactory one yet the lessee gets all the best attractions in Hayman's and Leavitt's circuit as well as the few traveling companies that play at the Alcazar, and is doing his best with the materials he has to work with.

GEORGE THATCHER'S MINSTRELS.

The people who have seen George Thatcher's Minstrel Company are ready to dispute Cleveland's extravagant assertion that he has penned in all that is best in minstrelsy. Thatcher's company gives a brighter, snappier programme than any other that has been on this coast for a long time. Thatcher himself is a merry comedian, and with him are Lew Dockstader, several other good comedians, an excellent sextet of vocalists and specialists to make up an interesting olio. This company will be at the Oakland Theater Monday and Tuesday evenings of next week, just having completed an engagement of unusual profit at the California Theater, San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO THEATERS.

The popularity of Belasco and De Mille's play, Men and Women, is no whit abated, and Mr. Bouvier of the Baldwin looks pleased every evening. The play will continue during next week. Charles Frohman's company is as good as any that plays the modern society drama in this country.

Thatcher's minstrels tomorrow evening will give their last performance at the beautiful California Theater. The play for next week is Archie Gunther's Mr. Barnes of New York.

The Bush-street Theater will have a change of bill next week. The star will be none other than John L. Sullivan, in the play which Duncan B. Harrison has fitted to the pugilist's peculiar abilities.

At the Alcazar Katie Emmett will play The Blue and the Gray.

THE entering wedge of a complaint that may prove fatal is often a slight cold, which a dose or two of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral might have cured at the commencement. It would be well, therefore, to keep the remedy within reach at all times.

Temperance Union Programme for the Warm Days.

SCHOOL OF METHODS AT PACIFIC GROVE.

The Oakland Ladies Who Will Take Part in the Entertainment and Instruction.

[The press department of the W. C. T. U. is alone responsible for the matter in this column.]

The annual meeting of the Summer School of Methods of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union at that charming resort, Pacific Grove, July 14th-21st will be one of the most attractive ever held. Mrs. B. Sturtevant, past president of the California Woman's Christian Temperance Union, instituted the first school of methods ever held in the State, several years ago; and great enthusiasm and inspiration for prosecuting the work for the ensuing year has been gained by all White Ribboners who attended. Mrs. Peet now has the entire supervision of the programme; and no doubt her large experience and her knowledge of the many talented Woman's Christian Temperance Union women throughout the State will furnish an intellectual banquet which all will enjoy. Among the many attractions the department work will not be the least interesting. Mrs. S. J. Churchill, the superintendent of Evangelistic Work, will present the claims of the Lord Jesus Christ and the deeper consecration of Christian women every day and will be assisted by the best talent in the State, among whom are Mrs. E. H. Burbank and Mrs. A. B. Gove of Oakland.

Miss S. M. Severance will tell of the grand victory for woman suffrage when the bill passed the Senate of California, largely through the efforts of that chivalrous Senator from Alameda county, W. E. Dargie of THE OAKLAND TRIBUNE. Mrs. Grace Kimball of Oakland, superintendent of the press, will urge the claim of this important agency, and M. G. C. Edholm, the official reporter, will tell of the kindness of the Oakland papers in granting a weekly column, and San Francisco press, the religious press, and the patent outsides in "carrying the news" for temperance on their white wings these precious "leaves, which shall be for the healing of the nations."

Sabbath observance will be duly insisted upon by Mrs. Mayhew of Sacramento. Dr. Van Kirk of Oakland will prove in her fascinating manner that hygiene is the most important department of all.

Mrs. Dr. Bentley will portray the wondrous power of heredity and inspire mothers and fathers to leave the best heritage in the world to their little ones, a healthy body, of clear mind and a clear soul.

As for the literary and musical features, Miss Fannie Ward, the gifted elocutionist, will give some of her superb readings and enlighten the ladies on the mysteries of Delsarte, physical culture and the beauties of the Jenness Miller costumes. The University Glee Club will probably sing their inimitable songs. Mrs. Van Pelt, the editor of the Pacific Ensign and well known as an attractive speaker on the temperance platform, will give an evening of "War Reminiscences" from her personal experience. An old folks concert may carry all back to "ye olden tyme," and many more good things are in progress of evolution in Mrs. Peet's fertile brain, among which will be her own bright speeches which she is too modest to count of any worth, but which her comrades value as among the most brilliant of literary and spiritual gems.

The Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union under the supervision of Miss Winnie Morriss, State superintendent, will present a charming appearance, and by their intellectual gifts will prove the speedy success of the temperance cause when the future wives and mothers are Y's—how good if there were none otherwise. Mrs. Nellie Blessing Eyster will exhibit the strength of the Loyal Temperance Legion, the light infantry of the temperance cause. Mrs. Henrietta Skelton and Mrs. Pow Smith will bring cheering news from the field.

Besides the Woman's Christian Temperance Union entertainment there are other societies that will keep the "ball rolling" through the entire season. The District Conference, Young Men's Christian Association day, Pacific Grove Retreat Association, the Chautauqua Summer School of Normal Review, under the leadership of Professor S. D. Waterman, and then the splendid Chautauqua Assembly, with Dr. A. C. Hirst and Mrs. M. J. Field at the helm, Woman's Christian Temperance Union School of Methods, Midsummer Reunion, Itinerants' Club of the California Conference and the California Conference of the Methodist Church, ending September 16th. It will be seen that every intellect can here find from these varied programmes intense enjoyment, and therefore Pacific Grove is the best place where one can spend their summer vacation.

As for the delights of this famous resort, words fail to tell what language cannot describe, and as one of old said, "Come and see."

W. C. Morrow eloquently says of the trip: "Leaving San Francisco, the traveler, taking a train on the Coast Division of the Southern Pacific Company, is swiftly carried southward toward Monterey through a country of marvelous beauty. A few miles out from the city, and he passes through charming towns in San Mateo county, where are seen the out-of-town mansions of San Francisco's millionaires, set in great forests of oak, and surrounded by broad acres of gorgeous flowers in perennial bloom. Vineyards and orchards appear on every hand. The beautiful city of San Jose, with its wonderful electric-light tower, is traversed from end to end, only fifty miles from San Francisco. Orchards, vineyards, grain fields, forests of oak, stately country mansions, delightful towns and villages, the great dome of the Lick Observatory, glittering in the sunlight on the summit of Mt. Hamilton—these are passed in quick succession. On the left are seen the rounded outlines of the Coast Range mountains, brown and bare; on the right the Santa Cruz mountains, intervening between the traveler and the ocean. Dark, heavily wooded slopes are these, with strange blue and purple shadows in the deep ravines, and a blaze of golden sky beyond. Streams bordered with giant sycamores are passed. The mountains close in upon the road and then recede. The Pajaro river, swollen by winter rains, runs a losing race with the train as the two, side by side, drop swiftly down the gorge.

Then the river is left, and the beautiful Pajaro and Salinas valleys come into view, with their pretty towns, their great fields of grain, their sugar-beet plantations and mammoth refinery, and the great dark Salinas river, wide and turbid, and to the left the Gabilan mountains overlooking the sea. A little farther, and glimpses of Monterey bay are seen on the right between the low sandhills that in ages past were cast up by the sea. Then come brown hills and valleys, and suddenly an enchanted garden is entered; for the train has halted at the station of the Hotel del Monte, one hundred and twenty-five miles from San Francisco and less than a mile from the quaint old town of Monterey.

Then, too, the pleasures offered to the guests, lawn tennis, croquet, music in all forms, social delights, and above all, the sea baths, which are a never-failing source of enjoyment.

But Pacific Grove is specially dear to the philanthropic and Christian heart because of these grand summer meetings, and also because it is always a standing example of what a Christian community is when there is no saloon to curse it. Though it is quite a town, and in summer swells to a city of 5000 people, there is neither policeman nor jail, because there is no saloon. Is there any town or village in California where saloons exist that has the same record? If prohibition works such marvelous good for Pacific Grove why will it not work the same marvelous good for the State and the nation? There could be no better advertisement for Pacific Grove than this for parents when choosing a spot for their summer outing and wish to find a place safe for their children and free from the demoralizing influence of the saloon.

The pleasures of Pacific Grove can never be fully expatiated upon. The scenery is all that an æsthetic heart can wish, the blue waves of Monterey bay lying placid in the sunshine save where the gentle motion stirs to crusted billows, whose dashing spray in the light seems a crown of flashing diamonds.

The dark green pines make a background of surpassing beauty and seem to kiss the sky, which, lover-like, bends to them in stately grace. Lying between the forest and the sea, and itself embowered in trees, is the embryo city, Pacific Grove.

The same facile pen writes this of the famous caravansary, the Hotel del Monte:

"What can be said in sufficient praise of this marvelous creation? If, ten years ago, the seeker for the choicest of nature's blessings had pitched his tent in this vast garden of giant oaks and pines, where ferns and wild flowers grew in modest seclusion from the public gaze; where soft winds, scent-laden, whispered their secrets to the pines; where sun-kissed, azure-tinted hills and mountains watched from afar the long lines of silver breakers chasing one another on the sands, and the distant rumble of the surf and the near crooning of the pines invited to unspeakable content and peace—if he had seen this picture of infinite grace he would have said: 'Here is all earthly perfection.' But if, while he slept, Aladdin's geni had sat down in the grove this wonderful hotel, with its airy modern Gothic facades, its incisive angles, its many sharp gables, minarets and towers, its dormers and window-hoods and broad verandas, and had planted about it a vast garden of the rarest and most gorgeous flowers from every country of the earth, and thus added undreamt-of beauties to the loveliness of the spot—what tongue could express his wonder and delight, what pen describe the boundless charms, what brush depict this form, expanse and color? Yet the wild natural scene of the traveler who found in it perfection did exist, Aladdin's ring was rubbed, and the Hotel del Monte passed from the unimaginable into actual existence less than ten years ago. Since then its name has penetrated wherever civilization is found, and the cultured and refined of all nations have shared its hospitality."

El Carmelo Hotel rises in architectural beauty and by its homelike attractions enchants its guests. Stately residences, beautiful homes, cozy cottages and numberless tents make a picture of summer loveliness, and bring the pleasures of camping out on a summer at the seaside within the reach of all purses.

Boating and fishing and swimming and picnicking and driving are favorite amusements, and "all goes merry as a marriage bell" all summer long. One of the finest drives in the world is the twenty-five mile circuit which includes a visit to the old Carmel Mission, which was erected by Juanapiro Serra in 1776, and stands as a monument to the Christ and his blessed doctrines of love to every soul on earth, including Indians and Chinese.

But the shortening space reminds that type refuse to be compressed even for the enthusiasm of a White Ribboner when discanting on the pleasures of the annual School of Methods at Pacific Grove. As usual, the Southern Pacific and San Francisco and North Pacific, the stage lines of Mendocino and Lake counties and the Pacific Steamship companies grant reduced fares. The Southern Pacific grant one and one-third rates, and make the best conditions as to time ever given. The railroad certificates are good from May 4th to September 20th, the only condition being that the holder must attend the School of Methods and have it signed by Superintendent of Railroad Rates. For folders giving all information as to expense, write H. R. Judah, Southern Pacific Railroad, San Francisco. For certificates send stamp to Official Reporter and Superintendent of Railroad Rates,
